FARMING COMPARED WITH OTHER BUSINESS PURSUITS.

An Address

Delivered by WELLINGTON SMITH, of Lee,

At the Fiftieth Annual Fair of the Housatonic Agricultural Society, at Great Barrington on Friday, October 2, 1891.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: Your Society having in the past honored by inviting to address you at your annual gatherings, Governors and clergymen, senators and lawyers, Members of Congress, and professional men, your committee, this year, selected a member of that class whose interests are so closely identified with yours, and as a representative of the manufacturers I thank you for the courtesy. I do not propose to talk to you about religion, or politics, the tariff, or how to manage your farms. You are already well informed on these subjects. There is an impression abroad that farmers are, as a class, more discontented than those in other callings, have a harder lot, and are more inclined to grumble at the results of their business enterprises than people generally. Perhaps this is illustrated by what I read a few days since in one of our great dailies: "A gentleman driving through the country met a farmer, and asked him how his crops were. He replied "bad, very bad; been too dry." The gentleman replied: "Why, your neighbor near here says his crops are bad because it has been too wet." The farmer replied: "Well, his farm is a mighty sight bigger than mine."

Perhaps, if I can show you from my business experience and observation, that there is a sharp competition in nearly all business callings, depreciation in values, losses and failures to a greater extent than in farming, you may feel better contented and resolve to fight life's battles with renewed courage and hope.

I began my business career when fifteen years old as clerk in a country store, worked from six in the morning until nine at night and received as salary $50 a year and my board. I did not need any quieting powders to put me to sleep when night came. The firm for which I worked failed, one of the partners started again but failed twice afterward, owing to bad debts and competition. I then tried a small manufacturing business but it was not a success, then went to New York and engaged as travelling salesman. The firm I was with failed, one of the partners started again manufacturing and has failed twice. I commenced the paper business after two years experience travelling and have had in it a fair share of success, but it has only been by persistent hard work and by overcoming many troublesome obstacles. Nearly every town in our country has its history of manufacturing and mercantile failures, and those who have made the matter a study state that over 80 per cent. of those who engage in business, at some time in their career fail. Farmers show no such per cent. of failures. Your calling is also one of the healthiest in the world and I have lived long enough to learn that Health is better than Wealth. You produce healthy boys and girls and men and women.

The sleepless nights, the worry and anxiety of conducting large business enterprises, the losses by fire and flood and bad debts, you are largely free from. Let me give you an experience of a friend with a strike of his workmen. He was a large stove manufacturer and was informed by his foreman that the moulders wished to see him. He went to them and asked if they were not well paid for their work; they replied they were; he then asked if they were not well and properly treated; they replied that they had no complaint to make on that score, but they stated that they wished to control the hours of labor and number of apprentices, etc., by a committee. The proprietor asked how many of the committee he was to appoint. "None," they said. "It amounts, then," replied the owner, "to this, that you propose to run my business; I am not constituted so that I can allow that. Now all of you who wish to work for me under the old arrangement can do so, and I will protect you; any that now leave my employ can never work for me again." About one-half the men remained; he was obliged to teach new men at a great loss. Those that left put a patrol about the works and kept it there for fourteen months, to assault and intimidate those who were working and trying to support their families. Several were arrested and imprisoned for their lawlessness. Tho owner was successful in the end, but it cost him forty thousand dollars to carry the fight through.

You, often in doubt, look at a manufacturing establishment and think of it in comparison with your farms, but do you realize that often such establishments represent as much capital as is invested in one hundred farms and employ more help than that number ef farms would do. Mr. Lester T. Osborne stated in his paper, read at the Farmers' Club of Egremont, that there had been a great decline in the value of farms, and in the prices of farm products in the past few years. No doubt this is so, but it is also true of everything. Mills have declined in value; three are idle in the town where I reside, and one was recently sold at one-fifth of its cost. This is also true of other manufacturing lines, owing to more favorable locations, new and improved machinery, etc. You farmers are troubled about short water for your stock often, but the manufacturers suffer great loss and expense for steam, when such a drouth as now, prevails. It does me good sometimes to know the troubles and annoyances of other business men, and to find that no one is free from such things, but I think there is a better prospect ahead for the farmer. Nearly all the best land has been taken, and there can be no such increase in acreage in the future as there has been in recent years. The population is increasing faster than farmers are. Mr. Erastus Winman, in an article in the North American Review for July, gives some very interesting figures on this point. He says: "The last census showed an increase for ten years of about twenty per cent. In the cities the increase was 45 per cent., while the farming increase was only 14 per cent." From 1871 to 1885-fourteen years. Mr. Winman states, that "the increase of farmers and farm lands was 112 per cent while the increase in population during the same period was but 44 per cent." This shows why farmers' products have been so low, but now a change has come and the largest crops ever raised in this country are to be marketed at good prices to supply the markets at home and abroad, and as the population is increasing within this country and abroad faster than the farmers, it is certain that farmer's products in the future are to bring better prices, and that means prosperity to all classes, for it increases the purchasing power of the largest single class in our country. So, farmers, cheer up, run in debt sometimes to enlarge your business and work it off. Do better always if you can, but if you cannot, then enjoy what you have and don't go about grumbling at everything. Look at the pleasant side of things. Some always look at the dark side and see all the defects. Show them a fine horse or a fine cow that may have nine good points and one defect, they will always notice and point out the defect and talk about it more than the other nine good qualities. I have traveled in this country and in Europe and find that there are as good, pleasant and comfortable homes among the farmers of Berkshire county as exist among any class of people of like circumstances, and much better than in most places. A very rich acquaintance of mine was asked how it seemed to be worth millions. He replied he had never thought much about it, but he knew he had no more to eat now than when he was much poorer and that he thought he did not enjoy his food as well. He certainly did not sleep as well as formerly and could wear no more clothes. Money often creates more wants than it satisfies and the worry and fret about the loss of it takes away much of the pleasure of its possession. All classes of people are at times discontented and this is well illustrated by the story of "The Grey Mare is the Better Horse" Several years ago a man married a wife and, as he should, thought she was the pleasantest, most agreeable and loving lady of his acquaintance. After a few months, however he thought she wanted her say and her way, much more than half the time. (Those of us who have had experience in such matters would have expected this and yielded gracefully as we all have to do in the end), but he became dissatisfied and went to his wife's father and told him, he was very much disappointed in his daughter; that when he married her she was very pleasant and agreeable and seemed to want to please him and consult his wishes in nearly everthing but now she wanted her way all the time, etc. The father replied; "It is so with all the ladies; you will find you are no exception to the rule and to prove this I make you the following proposition: Take a pair of my horses and a dozen of eggs, drive about the country, and everywhere you find the wife has her say and way, leave an egg: and where you find the husband has his way, leave a horse, and if your dozen of eggs are not disposed of before the horses, I will take my daughter back; but if the eggs go first, you are to keep your wife and accept the situation as the fate of mankind." The young man said that was fair and started on his travels. It was not long before all the eggs were gone but one, and he still had both horses. At the close of a pleasant afternoon he drove into a village and saw a gentleman sitting quietly on his porch, while the wife was working among her flowers. All seemed so quiet and peaceful that he thought. "Here I shall find what I am looking for." He begged permission to stay with them, and after consulting the wife it was granted. She seemed to consult her husband's wishes about nearly everything; so at last the traveler told his errand and concluded that, at last, he had found a place to leave a horse. They thought so too. In the morning he led out the horses for the husband to take his choice, and he selected a bay one, but his wife said the grey mare was the better horse, and she insisted upon his taking the grey. After listening to the discussion for some time, the young man said that he would leave his last egg and drive home to accept his fate and be discontented no more. Can we not learn wisdom from this fable?

One of our statesmen in addressing a graduating class from college, gave three words of advice that I think will apply to all of us in our various business occupations. They were, "Dig, Stick, Save." We must apply ourselves early and late in whatsoever we attempt. We must stick to it to accomplish success, and whatsoever our income we should aim to save some of it yearly.

In closing, I will quote again from Mr. Osborne's address, as it expresses my views exactly. He stated that in his opinion "good farms have depreciated in value less in Berkshire county and there has been greater prosperity among the farmers than in most any other section. We live in a county that has already a world-wide reputation for wealth, for the beauty and variety of its scenery and for its lovely drives, and men of culture and means are fast settling among us. Let us remember that we have a goodly heritage and that we possess homes in a country the description of which exceeds in beauty that of the promised land. We have a land of hills and valleys, of green fields, of fountains and running brooks. We have a people who reverence the Sabbath and respect those truths which make nations to stand firm as the everlasting hills, and without which they crumble away to ruin."

So let us take courage and go forward to fight the battles of life with renewed vigor, and a determination to succeed and to do each his part, and bear his share in life's obligations.

Lace, Drawn Work and Darning.

Your committee found in this division not a large number of entries, but a highly creditable display of articles and, in returning its list of awards, desires to speak a few words of honest praise for the fair competitors who produced and exhibited such perfect, delicate specimens of their handiwork.

We are proud of these daughters of Berkshire, whose fingers have such magic in their touch as to cause to spring up beneath them laces so web-like yet firm, and so carefully made as to compare favorably, so far as they go, with the productions of the expert Swiss lace workers. Lace making should be encouraged, for these soft, graceful articles add so much to the dainty femininity of a woman's attire.

The drawn work showed the largest number of entries, and many pieces seemed the perfection of their kind, so perfect that they might have been the work of machines instead of being wrought by fingers.

The darning on clothing was so nicely done that it became so much a part of the cloth as to require a mark around the darned place for an index.

Excellence is measured by quality, not quantity. By this standard the exhibit in this department was of superior excellence. The ladies did their work in a commendable manner and we would accord to them their full meed of commendation. We congratulate the Society upon having such skilled supporters and think it should more generously encourage their efforts and promote a larger competition. The scarcity of the fancy articles in the hall, the emptiness of the cases set aside for this department of the fair, was a subject of general remark among the attendance this year. The cause of this somewhat meagre display is attributable, we believe, to the limited number of premiums offered and, possibly, in part to the small space given for exhibitions. It would seem that the interests of the Society demand a more liberal premium list in the various divisions of fancy work. It is a department that is attractive to a large porportion of the patrons of the fair. These wish to examine closely and carry home new ideas, hoping to add to the cheerfulness and adornment of their homes, or to the tastefulness of their apparel. All these things have a tendency to culture and refinement, touching many lives, hence a wise expenditure of the Society's funds. The premiums are high enough and the list a good one as it now stands. The need is for added classes. At present, articles have to be entered where they do not belong, strictly speaking. For instance, in our division, because of the classification, we were obliged to compare very handsome specimens of darned net lace with the more useful but more homely darned clothing, under the entry head "Darning." Between these there is no comparison and the question of doing justice to those concerned, was as serious as though the matter under consideration had been of great value. We awarded as we deemed nearest just.

We would suggest adding first and second premiums of $2 and $1 for best fancy darning; also like premiums for darning of clothing by girls under fifteen years of age. We would be very loyal to the old Society in all her interests, and in offering these suggestions we do not take a position of criticism, but are looking to the advancement of her interests, increasing her attractions and multiplying her benefits.

Report of Committee on 2d Division of Fruits.

The committee found the finest lot of fruit ever shown in their division, each entry fit for a premium. Mr. Little kindly explained his treatment of his orchard: Soil, a deep loam, with considerable sand. Manure, ashes and hen manure with slops of the house. Trees stand in grass. Stable manure fresh, injurious to the trees and fruit. Mr. Bartholomew's statement: Trees, well cut back before planted. Soil, a gravelly state. Manure, ashes and slops of the house; fresh stable manure highly injurious. Trees cut back each year when they have made much growth.

Your committee think that a statement of the care of soil and manner of cultivation would be a great help to many members of the society.

Yours, GEORGE W. PARRISH.

Secretary's Report.

The Annual Cattle Show and Fair of the year 1891 was of unusual interest and the earnest hopes for its success were generally realized. For the first time in many years the weather was fine during the entire three days of the Fair, and the attendance was remarkably large each day. The exhibition of thoroughbred cattle and of blooded colts and horses was very large, and of a higher standard of excellence than that of any previous year. The show of fruits and vegetables was unusually fine, while the display of flowers and plants was by far the largest and best ever seen on the fair grounds. On Wednesday, Governor Russell visited the grounds for a few hours, and made a short address. One of the attractions that added interest to the Fair was the mammoth yoke of cattle, weighing 5,400 pounds, kindly loaned by the owner, Mr. Charles R. Barnum, of Lime Rock, Conn. Three bicycle races took place on Wednesday; also a successful balloon ascension, with daring trapeze performance and parachute descent, which was repeated on Thursday. On Friday, Company K, of Hartford, Conn., visited the Fair, and won general applause and commendation by their perfect evolutions, their handsome uniforms, and their gentlemanly conduct. They were accompanied by Colt's Band of twenty-five pieces, who gave a delightful band concert in the afternoon. The intervals between the trials of speed of trotting horses were occupied with foot races, potato races, tug of war and other sports. Most excellent music was furnished each day of the Fair by Gartland's 10th Regiment Band, of Albany, N. Y. The entries comprise 384 head of cattle, of which 126 are thoroughbred; 389 head of sheep, 43 swine, 212 horses, and 304 of poultry; total live stock, 1,332. There were 348 entries of field crops, and 907 entries in the various departments in the hall, making a grand total of 2,587 entries.

A Farmer's Institute was held at the Town Hall in Great Barrington on Wednesday, January 28th.

D. C. Millard, of Egremont, read a paper on the question, "How shall awarding committees be appointed?" He proposed two ways; one of which would be to select from each town its proportion of representative men, and draw their names from a box, according to the jury system; another way, to hire a competent judge for each department, to decide upon merits only.

J. H. Rowley of Egremont, read a paper entitled, "Ought the Society to continue to offer premiums on farms and growing farm crops?" He advocated the continuance because it is in accordance with a long established custom, and in obedience to the statutes of the State, also with the by-laws of the Society. The subjects that had been presented were discussed by M. I. Wheeler, S. K. Williams, Jared Lewis, C. B. Benedict, W. H. Day, Robert M. Curtiss, T. S. Baldwin, and others, and then the meeting was dissolved.

An Institute was held at the Town Hall, Great Barrington, on Wednesday, February 11th. Theron L. Foote of Lee read a paper on "The true principles of breeding." In the discussion that followed, P. A. Russell expressed his opinion that a good dam adds 60 per cent. to the calf. He advocated crossing the breeds to get the best results; a Jersey bull with a Guernsey or Holstein cow, as he thinks pure Jersey milk too thick. Replying to a question, he does not disapprove breeding from animals injured by accidents that do not affect their usefulness. Caleb Ticknor thinks all unsoundness should be avoided in breeding; also, that some animals have been so highly inbred that they are degenerating, having passed the zenith of their prosperity.

T. L. Foote thinks this may apply to horses but not to cattle.

M. I. Wheeler thinks results will be decidedly different where the sire is of one breed and the dam of another, than where the sire is of the latter breed, and the dam of the former. After further discussion the meeting adjourned.

An Institute was held at the Town Hall, Great Barrington, on Wednesday, February 25th.

Mr. George Cruikshanks of Fitchburg addressed the meeting on "The Cultivation of Small Fruits and Flowers." He spoke first of the Strawberry, the king of small fruits, which is found in almost every clime. We learn of its cultivation in 1660. In 1806 Mr. Keene of England began experimenting in its improvement, and for a long time Keene's seedlings were the best known for cultivation under glass. In 1834 Charles Hovey brought improved varieties to America. The strawberry requires good, deep, moist soil; nothing better than thoroughly rotted barnyard manure. The ground must be kept free from grass and weeds. The plants should be set three feet by one foot apart, or they may be set two feet apart each way. Cut away all runners. If necessary water freely to last for several days at a time. After bearing fork out all weeds. When the ground begins to freeze cover lightly with straw or evergreen branches. Raspberries set four feet apart; blackberries six feet apart in rows. Currants do best in deep, rich, moist soil. Plant four foot apart each way, trim to twelve or fourteen inches high. Mulching may be removed after bearing. Old manure to be applied in fall, and spaded in in the spring. The speaker advocated the cultivation of the black currant for its medicinal qualities, and the gooseberry as a substitute for the cranberry. Grape culture is mentioned at a very early date. The vines live to a great age. There is one in Burgundy over 400 years old. The soil required should be dry rather than wet. There are many places on a farm where they can be grown to advantage. They may be set six feet apart and trained to horizontal wire; strip off shoots to two or three leaves, and continue through the season. Prune after fall of the leaf, before winter sets in. To prevent mildew or black rot, apply the Bordeaux mixture. It is prepared by dissolving 6 pounds of sulphate of copper in 16 gallons of water, and 4 pounds of lime in 4 gallons of water, when cool mix, and apply with a syringe. Before the foliage appears there may be used 19 pounds of Sulphate of Copper in 22 gallons of water, with 33 pounds of lime in 6 gallons of water. The Werden grape is a week to ten days earlier than the Concord, and is better; also, Moore's Early. Other varieties were recommended.

For potted plants, old sods mixed with one-third barn manure, run through a course seive; small roots require fine soil. If pots are too large the soil will sour; use small pots and change to next size when required. In spring put cuttings in pots, plunge in ground till fall, then prune away part. To see if plants are watered enough rap on the side of the pot with knuckle; if dry, it will sound hollow. For drainage put coarse pieces of sod or moss in bottom of plants. For roses the soil cannot be too rich. A list of the most desirable house plants, roses and shrubs was given by the speaker.

After a vote of thanks to Mr. Cruikshanks for his very interesting and instructive address the institute was dissolved.

HENRY T. ROBBINS, Secretary.

ADDRESS

Delivered Before the Housatonic Agricultural Society at their Annual Exhibition, Held in Great Barrington, September 30, 1892,

By REV. DR. HARTLEY.

Mr. President, Members of the Housatonic Agricultural Society: Ladies and Gentlemen:—The service which you have requested of me on this occasion is somewhat new, but though new it is none the less willingly accepted. From the marked activity of the past week, as well the bright and healthful appearance of the society's representatives before me, I do not think that I have been summoned in any official capacity — to lay away the Housatonic Agricultural Society for its last sleep; on the contrary, there is no evidence that it has ever known such a thing as sleep, and surely if the same energy and force that now permeate it continue to attend and thrill it, it can never die. Rather am I here, it may be, to re-marry you to the holy and noble labors in which for years so many of you have been engaged: for it is only, as one is wedded to a vocation, that honorable and gladdening results may be looked for. If any one can show just reason why you and that which you love may not be joined together, let him now speak. I hear no voice. Regard yourselves, therefore, members and friends of this society, as betrothed to the soil of beautiful Berkshire: may you have many followers to rise up and call you blessed. Receive my sincere congratulations. Kiss the bride; kiss the groom — nor ever, forget the day, in which you gave true allegiance to the fields of old historic Massachusetts.

And, now, before we partake of the prepared feast, a little friendly counsel; and let it be in the line that will tend to make us better citizens of the prosperous commonwealth in which providence has been pleased to lead us, and beneath whose sod some day we may —

"With the rude forefathers' of the hamlet sleep."

Giving my theme a didactic form of expression, it reads: The relations which every Christian sustains to the State of which he is a member.

Perhaps some one may object to my use in this presence of that qualifying word Christian; I cannot do otherwise. Not that I would at any time take advantage of my position as a humble minister of the gospel, or designedly wound the feelings of an auditor; by no means; rather am I mindful that ere the distinguished navigator, Christopher Columbus, whom the American nation at this very moment is preparing to worthily honor, weighed anchor at Palos, Spain, he sought and received the blessing of the church in which he was a devout communicant; and I remember, also, that just so soon as his feet pressed this Western world, he kissed the earth, and knelt in prayer to God for the many favors which he had so recently received at His hands; and I recall that when our Puritan fathers left for a home in the New World, daily, during the voyage, and so soon, also, as they landed, full recognition was made of God's guidance and care. Indeed, our fathers in the Mayflower began their famous political compact in the words, "In the name of God, amen." Nor would I forget that when the representatives of the several States were assembled for the establishment of these United States, the larger number of them were Christian men, and as honest and consistent in that belief as they were loyal to their political vows: and you no more can silence the influence of Christianity in the acts or doings of an intelligent manhood than you can wash a robe without wetting it.

America, then having been discovered by Christian thought, and since the Mayflower's voyagers were Christians, and in quest of that liberty which they had derived from the Scriptures; and the founders of the Republic, in the person of Franklin, amid the earliest sessions of the first Congress moved that divine guidance be sought in its deliberations; I claim that America is nominally a Christian nation; and to-day she is indebted to Christianity and only to Christianity for the moral force that pervades her institutions, and which has given to her, her power, progress and all her present glory. What would have been the history of this loved land had it been given up to minds unfriendly to the teachings of revelation, or had those royal principles which run as a scarlet thread through the New Testament, been set aside, ignored — who will answer? Follow unbelief to its logical conclusions, and not only would you challenge the authority of revelation, but you would have no heavenly charter for our noble liberties, and no God; and, therefore, no superintending mind from which the nations of the world could receive their proper development. The Bible has done more to give good government to mankind than all the genius, statesmanship and diplomacy the world has ever known.

In remarking upon the theme which has just been announced, it should be said as preliminary to the same: That government as government is ordained of God; the power and the authority are derived from Him, but the form which that power may assume is human. Under the hand of a skillful artificer, gold may readily be converted into coin, or a thimble for some lily finger: but the metal itself is from the creating hand of God. In like manner with civil power; the form is man's, but the authority itself, the material, is of heaven. Whatever, also, may be the form of government under which one lives, if it be in harmony with the revealed truth of heaven, obedience to it is a necessity; and to war against it is to war aginst the divine truth; and with all this, every individual has certain relations to the State which are no less ordained than is the State itself.

As much light will naturally be thrown on the subject before us from a proper conception of the State, let us then at once ask ourselves, what is the State? We cover this plain enquiry when we say that some look upon the State as proceeding directly from the family; others regard it as based upon a compact, while others again view it as having its beginning in force. Such are the more general notions which have been held by persons of every nationality when they would endeavor to account for this well-known organization. Which, however, is the correct conception, or, are they all wrong? Whatever be our answer, this manifestly is certain; if we allow ourselves to be influenced by the Bible the State is not always to exist; as there was a time when it was not, so a time shall come when it shall not be. Revelation is most eloquent in its announcement that the future shall witness among men what it calls the "Kingdom of God," and when that period arrives the State is no longer. The State spans, so to say, simply an interim in history, and that interim which lies between its birth and the coming of the "Kingdom of Heaven." In fact, the birth of this promised kingdom means the death of the State, and toward this finality the State is tending.

Now when we hear men speaking of the State as primarily proceeding from the family, remembering the mode in which a family is constituted, how the younger or weaker power is often transferred to the stronger and older, there does seem to be some ground for such a conviction. Still mere parallelism is not argument any more than sound is substance. We can predict like results from similar conditions, but not like results in different spheres, though there be a similarity of forces in those spheres, and the State and family are different spheres — totally so. In brief, the one — the family — is the sphere of affection; the State, that of justice. In the family, also, confidence, loving submission and willing obedience prevail; whereas, in the State, obedience is compulsory, and compulsory both by law and force. Take justice in its broadest sense, and what does the family know of it: and, on the contrary, what does the State know of the warm breath of kindness which forms the soul of family life? There must always be affection, heart, kindliness; and there must always be law, order and justice — these are necessary virtues, but how distinct! And if the elements which enter into the State be different from those which we find in the family, and if as is the seed, so must be the fruit, the State cannot be the product of the family so long as it is thus exposed to the influences of a different spirit. Nor is the State a compact; and by compact, we mean the majority agreeing to certain ordinances and the establishment of authority for their enforcement. Indeed, if the State be the decision of certain members, say the majority, then it is a mere formation of the will or the invention of the intellect.

No State was ever thus produced. For supposing that the people were lawless anterior to the formation of the State, and that the object of the State be to restrain or curb that lawlessness—if the State be the result of compact, then you have lawless people willing to be bound by law, and this is not the meaning of lawlessness, nor do such people make compacts. Nor has the State its origin in force. True States have been so made, and to-day the history of many nationalities is nothing more nor less than the history of a most uncompromising and persistent despotism. Men urged forward by an ambition which only death has been able to arrest, from time to time, have come upon the field of action whose one mission seemed to be the subjection of the weaker and less covetous to their own selfish ends, and they have founded a State; and some of these same States, minus certain fleeting changes, have survived the shock of centuries; but despotism is not the State. It may be the State in certain lands, and such also may be the only State that millions of people know as in Russia, but it is not the State: that is, as the normal and proper condition of society; as pure force is in direct opposition to the nature of the State. Indeed, the State exists that human affairs may not be arranged or controlled by force. Force in the State may be and is necessary, but not as a primary power. Say that force is the foundation of the State, then the greater the despotism — the grander and more solid the State. But we don't so read history, nor is such a conclusion at all in harmony with fact. Force, as such, has as often annihilated the State as it has created it.

In a single phrase the State has its existence or origin in a high and holy sense of justice — a justice born of a thoughtful, enlightened and unselfish nature. If we go back to that early period, when, in order to replenish the earth, man leaves the ark, we find Jehovah himself, for the purpose of securing the preservation of human life, declaring "whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man, shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made He man." At this early stage in the history of mankind, heaven itself is ordaining the law or enunciating the very principle upon which society and all the varied relations in life are to be established. From the fact that a man has been born, he has a right to live, and that right is his by nature, as well as by the decree of the Most High. Consequently, let any one interfere with that right and justice demands he be protected, and should one wrest from another his life, the life of this other is to be given up; and the execution of this penalty, or the maintenance of this right, is nothing less than what we call the State. Such, in its last analysis, is the State. True, all States bear within themselves an historical element which is subject to change, and the coming and going of the centuries give birth to certain movements; but deep down — far beneath all this fluctuating and accidental element — there is a permanent one, which is the love of justice, or the need of justice and its administration by its authorized organ.

The State, therefore, is no mere human organization, and born of caprice or selfish interests; it has its origin in God, in that love and sense of justice which we find Him so early in the history of the race decreeing; and which man, if he would have the State secure the highest and best results, is ever to recognize. The pilgrim fathers held to this notion of the State. Yet more, the State is rooted, and deeply rooted, in religion; and when thus constituted, it has all the authority of the divine will. Of course, here comes in the old doctrine of "the divine right of kings," with its many abuses, as well as "the sovereignty of the people," with its natural excesses. Kings or rulers have divine rights, not, however, as they rule for themselves, or even for others, but as they rule justly; as then they rule in obedience to the ordinances of God. Kings, therefore, are not masters, but servants, and servants for the maintenance under God of justice. The mere possession of power don't constitute the right to rule; the primary right is to rule justly. He who rules otherwise rules for some personal motive, and ruling for mere self is not justice; selfishness should no more have place in a government than in the creed of an individual. And the people also are sovereign only as they are right, and endeavor to govern justly. Often when differences exist among a people to such a degree as to culminate, it may be in open rebellion, the majority rise up and affirm that there will is to be recognized. Not at all. For a majority, as a majority, is to govern only when it is just in its demands; and minorities, also, are right when they demand that this same law of justice be given place. This is the bottom truth, or knotless plank in the State.

But without discussing any further the great principles involved in the State, let us give our subject a practical bearing. If the State has its origin in that high and holy sense of justice of which we speak, it is then the solemn duty of every citizen to take an active interest in its welfare. I know of no offense that seems to be more universally committed by worthy men in our day than the utter indifference which some at least manifest in what pertains to the government under which they live. It would appear that not a few look upon the relations which they sustain toward the State as positively forbidden, if not almost as criminal; seemingly they are something of which they are ashamed.

If ever a people should take a most active interest in the administration of government, Americans are that people; and for the double reason that the governing power is a derived power, and, also, they are so often called upon to change their rulers. The policy which is to shape and direct monarchial governments, for the most part, is fixed; at any rate, grand and fundamental changes are few, whereas it is altogether different in the State where universal freedom prevails; here, freedom as likely and as often secures a change of policy as the permanence of monarchial sovereignty contributes to oneness of action. Take any of the exciting political agitations into which, as a people, we are so frequently thrown — that period, forsooth, in which our own State is called upon to reaffirm or change its policy, and how few of those possessing the ballot have a full, free and definite understanding of the change, supposing it is a constitutional amendment upon which they are called upon to vote! In national questions of similar sweep, how small the number who may be said to really know and take in the fundamental purpose at issue!

Unhappily, not a few individuals are wholly indifferent to all these struggles for change; some, also, vote not as they have learned, but as they have been told; while with others again, its not principle that guides their action, but money. Now the bought vote, if known, should be a negative vote, and its repetition should be the forfeiture of the right to suffrage. Think of a certain politician affirming that in a close election, two-thirds of all the votes cast by the day laborers, minor mechanics and men of small means, could be purchased. Although the coast of our country be washed by two mighty oceans, there is no room in it for a ballot that represents a drink, a dime or a dollar. Behind every vote there should be intelligence — thought; if not, in no sense has it a representative value. The same is largely true with what is called a party vote. Following party at times is like accompanying the devil-bewitched swine that ran headlong from the Gadarene fields down into the sea.

Indeed, from the actions of some "party" is but another name for ambition, or the committing of one's self to be led here and there by irresponsible and self-constituted leaders to be severely let alone so soon as their purpose have been attained. The citizen who seemingly knows nothing but "party" is not unfrequently as oblivious to the end of government as to the inspiring motive of patriotism.

Politically considered, the wisdom of several millions of voters is much greater than that of a few party leaders. Personally, I have more faith in the people of the United States than in any chairman or national committee ever formed. The errors of public opinion are self-changing. As the essential force of a government is in the individual, men should do their own thinking. Bits and bridles are for the mouths of horses, not for freemen; God never meant that any human being should be harnessed — that was decided for our country under an apple tree at Appomatox.

Friends, justice is a priceless boon, nor can any one be indifferent to its presence, and power and government thrive as well without as with it. If we would have wise rule and the most beneficent results, love for it is to enter into and permeate a man's soul as blood the body. In the administration of government, the question never should be raised, what is easiest, still less, what is most profitable; but what is most honorable, as well as what will conduce most speedily to the diminishing of friction among men, lessen the need of law and knit heart to heart into one common humanity. Society is a common family; hence no member of it should desire action affecting others rights. The healthiness of the body is infinitely more than the healthiness of any individual member. Exclusive ownership is not the doctrine of love. Justice discards party, and therefore it is always represented as blind: and patriotism is not merely the love of home, as we naturally have an affection for the land in which we were born, whether it be among the icy ridges of the far north, or amid the verdant savannas of the South. The Ethiopian imagines that God made his lands and deserts, while angels only were employed in forming the rest of the globe. Patriotism is something moral; nor can any one be said to take an interest in his country who has not a love for the welfare of those who inherit it. Yet more, patriotism receives its grandest development only as we are loyal to those principles which enter into its civil constitution and give it solid prosperity. Yes, patriotism is principle; true, genuine principle; and the thought that should rule every lover of his country is the happiness of all. Long since Virgil wrote —

"The noblest motive is the public good."

And the grandest indication of all moral progress is when the people, ceasing to forget their individuality, become troubled and disturbed so often as any personal right or liberty is abridged, and justice fails to be seen in that mid-day glory and splendor which appertains to its very nature. Give me a nation of patriots, of men such as the poet Pope speaks:

* * * "Sincere
Statesmen, yet friends of truth, of souls
In actions faithful, and in honor clear,
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gained no title, and who lost no friend," and I have no fear for its future. Or broadening my language, give me a nation which first and last, in poverty or in riches, in adversity or prosperity, in evil or good report, and which amid all the shifting changes to which this active world is exposed has determined to preserve sacred and inviolate the rights of others, and whose single ambition is to see that these same rights are deepened and enlarged; and all anxiety concerning the political institutions of that country may be considered at an end; nor will the time be long coming before its people will be found rejoicing in blessings of which others to whom such a purpose has been foreign have not dreamed. And I may add, give me a nation of politicians, as we now use that word, and soon there will be no government worthy that name. A professional politician is one in whose heart not only is the sense of justice wanting, but he lives and moves and has his being in self; and not till self is enthroned, will he case his babblings.

Still another truth. Every member of the State should be well acquainted with all the forces which are at work affecting its interests; to enconrage them if good — to root them out if bad. Whatever may be the theory on which a government is based, this however is true, that the methods open and secret which now and then are employed to corrupt its administration, are neither few nor harmless. Verily, what evil forces might here be alluded to which frequently find full play in the State, and with what determination are they wielded? Who will say that some in our broad land are not seeking to open up springs to poison the crystal streams from which prosperous America to-day so freely and happily drinks? At times what malfeasance in office and prostitution of authority! What betrayal of trusts! What struggling for positions, negligence of duty as well as gross misrepresentation! What unscrupulous methods are employed to achieve ends otherwise unattainable! Nor is it very unusual to find absolute incompetency associated with positions of far-reaching influence. And yet the people submit to these and kindred practices as though they were the needed factors in all governments.

Not long since, at a convention in one of the Middle States, assembled for the nomination of State officers, a claimant contested his opponent's seat on the ground that the would-be occupant held it through manifest fraud; as, in balloting for his rival, the rubber bands which bound togother the name of the candidate were not even removed from the package; and thus were they found in the ballot-box: a charge which, it is fair to assume, was true, as the contestant gained his seat: and yet no rebuke was heard in that vast assembly, nor was a frown anywhere visible; rather, a broad laugh rolled over that great assembly as ripples the water when a mighty stone is cast into its bosom.

At this very hour more than fifty citizens of one of our States are behind prison bars for stuffing, at a recent election, the ballot box. A free country can know no higher crime. Less henious would have been the stabbing of the higher functionaries of the State — for such vacancies could readily have been filled. But corrupt the ballot box, give fraud undisputed sway, let unscrupulous men negative by foul means your or my vote, and they are robbing me of a privilege mine by my very birth-right; they are endeavoring to subtract from the State your and my personality; they are determined with the defeat of justice to enthrone selfishness and have it monarch; they are prostituting their privileges to the most ignoble ends, and they are the most bitter and malignant foes of the nation: and for the emoluments connected with position and power would not only impede civilization but wreck the very foundations upon which the grandest civilization rests, and over a ruined and prostrate country — stimulated by greed, would mount the throne. The ballot is the heaven permitted palladium of our civil rights. Smite it, and mankind with a mighty wail will roll back centuries and centuries to awaken in a bitter despotism — more bitter because it had lost its power. Smite it, and clique — corporations — trusts — unholy wealth, will soon be found forging fetters heavier and binding them tighter than even a Roman slave ever wore. Smite it, and the government of the people by the people dies — I repeat it, it dies; and out of its remains a new government will arise whose mission will be to deceive — to filch — to oppress — to slay. O no; the ballot must be kept pure and sacred: it must ever glisten with spotless integrity; it must not know even the approach of wrong or fraud; and it must be so firmly enthroned that nothing shall be able to unseat it — palsied be the hand uplifted against it.

Prosperous America does not live behind fortified castles, but in the breasts of its citizens — or better perhaps, its life under God is in the ballot — and when, therefore, that is surrendered, freedom is surrendered — and when freedom is surrendered slavery again appears to enter upon its cursed and blackened sway. If need be this truth must be burnt into the foreheads of the people — that any trifling with the ballot box is high treason.

Men talk of plagues visiting this and that country, and our own nation within a few weeks has received a great scare — but what is the advent of cholera or any other withering disease to a dead ballot-box, or an unjust disfranchisement of citizens in a land where the nature, character and execution of its laws depend upon the voice of the people! Our loved country can stand the invasion of many scourges as it has in the past, and it can afford to lay upon her solemn altar the lives of a million of her best and noblest sons and yet live; but, believe me, the death knell of the Republic shall have been struck when, under any pretext, the ballot-box is assaulted, and its patrons are denied the exercise of the privilege — the grandest civil prerogative in the world — the right to vote, and the additional right that the vote be honestly counted. This point in the administration of the State is to be most jealously guarded. The noble country of which we are citizens don't swing, as some suppose, on her mines, be they of coal, silver or gold, nor on her fields, though they be the boundless prairies of the west — nor on her factories or commerce, nor on the ease with which position can be obtained — nor yet on her educational advantages extraordinary as they are, but upon a clean ballot in the hands of justice-loving patrons, who use it in place of the living voice. Keep that inviolate, and the destiny of the nation is in the hands of its varied subjects, and that is where it truly belongs— no centralization, no oligarchy, but the people — always the people.

One further thought. It should be the aim of every citizen to see that full justice is meted out to every member of the State. It is said in our day crime is very rampant and it keeps steady pace with advancing civilization. I do not propose to discuss this question. We believe, however, that never were there more prominent criminals in our land than to-day, who have less reason to be violators of law. Now the State demands, and when I say the State I mean also high heaven, which ordained the State that all crime should receive its proper penalty. Punishment is as much a part of law as precept. Law loses its power when it ceases to punish; nay, there can be no law without penalty. In its final analysis punishment is simply the upholding of justice against disobedience. But how often is this justice withheld from many high in the social and financial world? What intrigues, also, are often resorted to, and by professedly honorable men to exculpate the known criminal, and frequently under what is called professional counsel! There is a poor man, and to keep his feet from being bitten by an arctic frost, is forced (shall I say) to steal a pair of boots to cover them; and there is a man, with whom he may have deposited his scanty savings, and now through some chicanery has closed his doors, consuming in that suspension, with unnumbered others, the small earnings of his bootless brother. The one is immediately imprisoned — while often the freedom of the other is no more interfered with than though he belonged to the elect. How few raise their voice against such injustice! The little thief is handcuffed and delivered to the jailer — the great thief is still welcomed — recognized, dined and wined. It is thus that genuine rascality is made respectable; and they make roguery respectable who are indifferent to the punishment of crime. All knavery, by whomsoever and wheresoever committed, should be promptly denounced.

The same desire should be exhibited for the punishment of him who wears fine linen and fares sumptuously every day as for the thief who enters the home at night, or for the way-layer who seeks his prey at day.

If God intended that justice should prevail, he also intended that punishment be a duty. Punishment is not the will of man, nor is it born of caprice; it is the will and decree of heaven; and that man is most like God, in his relations to the State, who is the lover of justice as well as its defender: and justice means equal rights to all of whatever character or color, be it in the form of gilded rewards or dire and lasting punishments.

And now I need hardly say that you, gentlemen and members of this Agricultural Society constitute no insignificant part of the State. The very last class as a class that the State can overlook or do without, are its farmers. You stand at its strategic points and in no mean sense are its master. No general, whatever may be his skill, nor batallion howsoever well drilled, can ever conduct a successful warfare without proper supplies. Farmers furnish supplies. The State can only exist in theory where its acres remain unploughed and unsown. Since the State then leans upon you, and your industries foster and develope new life, watch with a jealous eye her interests, nor allow anything to harm its healthiness or prevent its true and logical development. Farmers possess more true, honest sense than any class in the community; and it is well known that their educational attainments are in advance of others who claim to be important personages. They read, they listen, they talk and they think; and many of the best in the varied vocations of life are recruited from their ranks. The great cities in our land would have but little progress, nor would we read of such worthy leaders were it not for the cottages and the farms which dot our beautiful hills and verdant valleys.

There never has been a time when your honored profession has not called out the best thoughts and energies of the race, and given the world evidence of its true value. Many of the historic worthies of Jewish history, patriarchs, leaders, kings, seers and prophets, who have left behind them the most stimulating examples of faith, as well as some of the sublimest teachings that have ever dropped from human lips, were cultivators of the soil; and for years were identified with its beneficent products. The Mosaic law by its wise enactments and thoughtful requirements not only promoted but protected agriculture. What preserved the unity of the sacred race during their Egyptian experiences, and later kept them from that consuming idolatry with which the commercial nations became enamored save the pastoral life? It in no way affected the character of a High Priest that he was reared among the fields, mingled among flocks and herds, knew their ways and followed the plow in the open furrow. In fact every nation has regarded your calling as one of exalted honor. In primitive Rome, if the chroniclers are to be believed, deities were appointed to take charge of all grain in every stage of its development, and indifference to the cultivation of the soil was an offence involving severe penalties. Cato, as well as Cincinnatus, plowed their own lands; so did the Athenian nobles. Mighty Rome and classic Greece with all their splendors of temple and mausoleum were as nothing to their fields of corn, flecked here and there with numerous herds browsing in the sun.

In the estimation of Aristotle, a community of husbandmen, outranked all others, and Xenophon proposed that honorary distinction be given to its professors at Athens. So it has been down along the line of the ages. Who was a more thoroughly devoted, skillful and patient farmer than our own immortal Washington? It is written of him that during all those serious hours in which he was battling for a Republic and giving the most intense thought to the character of its founding, his farm was never out of his mind. Emerson assures us that "the first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land." It is true, and it is in this line in which your feet are treading.

Be then faithful to your calling. Every man is a debtor to his profession and should leave it the better from having been identified with it. Some day it will be seen that the skill of the farmer here in the East, will be a worthy match for the lowlands of the plains and the virgin prairies of the West.

Along this road science is now advancing with rapid step and gathering astounding trophies. The agricultural schools and colleges in our land are as important to its higher development as the academies and universities of classic culture. Be loyal then to your trusts, and loyal also to the government which has made and which as time advances will do even yet more to give your labors their legitimate significance. No enemy can successfully invade, nor can tyrant's heel ever crush a State that has the strong sympathy and earnest cooperation of those who till its fields and gather the harvest. Let the State then receive your continued support, and in time, rely upon it, it will give you her wealth, her honors as well as her protection.

Above all, see to it that the State is impregnated and guided by a biblical Christianity; if so, not only will it be moving along the path of the greatest good, but it will prove a happy boon and royal blessing to all identified with its interests, and who with loving hearts are anticipating the advent of "The Kingdom of Heaven."

God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts!

Butter.

Whole number of entries, 26.

Best twenty pounds of Butter, J. H. Rowley, Egremont, $5 00

The butter exhibited by me was made from the milk of thoroughbred Guernsey cows and their grades. The milk was set in a Cooley creamer twelve hours and then drawn off, and the cream allowed to stand until slightly acid, then churned in a Davis (No. 5), swing churn, at a temperature of sixty-two degrees. Time of churning, forty minutes. When the butter pellets were the size of a kernel of wheat, they were rinsed off from the inside of the churn with cold water, when the buttermilk was drawn off, and the butter rinsed in the churn twice with the cold water, then worked in a Reid butter worker and salted with Syracuse salt, one ounce to the pound, no coloring matter being used. No grain of any kind was fed to the cows. They were obliged to pick their living in the pastures, blanketed day and night with Buffalo flies. J. H. ROWLEY.

EGREMONT PLAIN, Sept. 28, 1892.

Best twenty pounds of Butter, E. M. Tyrrel, Egremont, $5 00

This butter was made from grade Jersey cows. The milk was set in common milk pans, churned in a dash churn, washed and salted, one ounce to the pound of butter; worked with a ladle and packed. MRS. E. M. TYRREL, Egremont.

Best twenty pounds Butter, L. T. Osborn, Alford, $5 00

The competitor makes no claim for originality, but has strictly adhered to the most important of all rules to be observed in butter-making. Keep everything connected with the dairy scrupulously clean and sweet, and provide as much as possible against sudden changes of temperature in the milk room. The rest is easy. The milk is set in the ordinary dairy pans and allowed to stand thirty-six hours before the cream is taken off, unless a very sudden rise in temperature makes it necessary to do so sooner. The cream is churned when there is the slightest suggestion of tartness. The old fashioned churn is used. The butter is then thoroughly washed and worked. An ounce of salt being used to the pound, and an interval of twenty-four hours allowed between the two workings

L. T. OSBORN, Alford.

Second best twenty pounds of Butter, George S. Sheldon, New Marlboro. $4 00

The milk from which this butter was made was set in Cooley creamer for twelve hours, then allowed to stand until slightly acid, churned in Davis' swing churn, thoroughly washed, and salted with about three-quarters of an ounce of salt per pound.

GEORGE S. SHELDON New Marlboro,

Second best twenty pounds of Butter, Mrs. Jerdon Vosburgh, Sheffield, $4 00

This butter is made from a dairy of thirteen cows, grade Jersey. Is set in shallow pans from twenty-four to thirty-six hours according to temperature of weather. Is churned in a dash churn and washed and salted with one ounce to one pound of butter.

MRS. JERDON VOSBURGH, Sheffield.

Third best twenty pounds of Butter, Mrs. L. Hulett, Sheffield. $3 00

My butter was made from cream raised by the Cooley creamer; salted three-fourths of an ounce to a pound of butter. Temperature of cream, about fifty degrees. It was thoroughly and carefully worked. MRS. L. HULETT, Sheffield.

Third best twenty pounds of Butter, W. F. Milligan, Alford, $3 00

Cream is raised in Cooley cans and churned with a Davis churn. Butter is worked with a ladle and salted with Ashton salt. No color is used. W. F. MILLIGAN, Alford.

Third best twenty pounds of Butter, William Bolton, Alford. $3 00

This butter was manufactured in the old fashioned way—churned in a dash churn. Butter washed with cold spring water, then salted, and after a time thoroughly worked.

ADDRESS

DELIVERED BEFORE THE HOUSATONIC AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, AT ITS ANNUAL EXHIBITION, HELD AT GREAT BARRINGTON, SEPTEMBER 29, 1893,

BY REV. ROBERT BENNETT,
Of Chelsea, Mass.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Housatonic Agricultural Society :—

I greatly appreciate your cordial expression, and thank you most heartily for the call to this agreeable service, in which I desire to pay a worthy tribute to your industry, liberality, integrity and honor. Whatever opinion we may entertain of the origin of man, it is evident from the first annals that he was a gardener. Happy and bright, and wise, and good, he walked the daisy dotted lawn of Eden, amid the beauty of trees, the fragrance of flowers, and the relish of everything that was good for food. And I know not to what delightful eminence he might have attained, if that handsome, inquisitive woman at his side had loved apples less, and apricots more. Yet, notwithstanding so great a fall in horticultural stocks, and so great a discount on agriculture as to produce an antagonism of "Thornes and Thistles," man made vast strides in husbandry and cattle culture, in the subjugation of the soil, the forest, the quarry and the mine. And it is a fair question whether with all our aids to civilization, our accumulations of wealth, and our constructions of science, we have a cattle king to-day equal to the first Patriarch of the Hebrews, who was rich in sheep and oxen, and who had "exceeding much cattle." Nor is there, in my opinion, a parallel corn buyer, to-day, with that generous ruler of Egypt who amassed the seven sumptuous harvests of his empire, and afterwards dealt it out with a liberal hand, in ample quanities, to an impoverished world. Neither do I think there is a match, in these days, for the man of the land of Uz, who had more driving stock than any ranchman on our plains, or any wool grower of Australia. But the unexampled king of the soil stands forth in the mighty monarch of Babylon. I venerate the man who was born with such a fancy, and cultivated such a pride, and who wedded to these such scientific skill, and such magnificent wealth, as made his famous hanging gardens the splendor and glory of his kingdom, and the wonder and admiration of all succeeding time. But time would fail me to tell of the silver shod shepherds of the Arabian plains, the gorgeously apparelled cattle breeders of Mesopotamia, or the princely husbandmen in the market gardens of Goshen, who, all down the centuries, have come treading the dewy meadows with their flocks, ranging with their herds through the ancient mountains, and bearing the fruit of the everlasting hills, and who still increase and multiply in the olive groves of the East, the vineyards of the South, the wheat fields of the West, and the apple orchards of the North. And so you have come of the brightest, wealthiest, noblest of all industries, from the Garden of Eden to the Garden of Berkshire,—the God-created, the God-sustained, and the God-crowned tillers of the soil.

I come, therefore, with great pleasure to speak, this morning, on "The Attractions of the Farm." And the first attraction I notice is your congenial situation. Your dwelling place, ladies and gentlemen, is the freest, freshest, grandest bit of all outdoors. The noblest sentiment ever uttered of this old world describes it as "The Garden of the Lord." How substantially He laid its foundations with stones of fair colors, whose seams are threaded with silver and gold. How delightfully He formed it by the mellow clods of the valley, and the sparkling granite of the hills. How beautifully He banked it with His cedars, and belted it with His pines, studding its glades with His oaks, and capping its summits with His firs. How charming He mottled the birds of the air, the fish of the brooks and the beasts of the field. With what pleasing splendors hath He embossed its vales with flowers, baptizing its lilies in the whiteness of His throne, bathing its violets in the azures of heaven, and dipping its roses in setting suns, surely it was such an entertaining view as this that fired the Israelitish bard when he sang, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God. Thou blessed the springing thereof. The pastures are clothed with flocks, the valleys are covered with corn, and the little hills rejoice on every side."

It is beside one of these "hills," at its base, or on its top, that the farmer's homestead stands. Nestling on the sunny side of the old orchard whose fruitful variety betokens liberal importation, pruning and care. In the front is the well-kept lawn, tastefully bordered with choice flowers, and adorned with bits of rare shrubbery. In the rear is the garden, not all gone to weeds, but set out and planted methodically and plentifully with seeds and roots and vines of the finest quality and richest yielding. Back of the orchard stretches the pasture where the ninety-and-nine are watched and folded with a tender shepherd's care, while beyond white harvests wave in fields of oats and wheat and barley and rye. On the right is the meadow with colts and cattle, and on the left the upland wood lot with its graceful chestnut, quivering beach, majestic elm, and knotted oak, and from which flows the stream that runs the neighboring mill. Large and convenient out-buildings, supplied with useful tools, hardware, lumber, feed, fuel and ice, and barns well filled with bents of hay, bins of grain, and stalls of blooded stock, make an estate attractive to the view, and worthy the highest ambition of man.

Then there is another attraction which I may describe as the domestic aspect of the farm. Of all the poetical conceptions of domestic bliss, family affection, or human friendship, which will stand admired while the world stands, the "Elegy" of Gray, and the "Cotter" of Burns, take the first rank, and in both the plowman is the ideal, and the plowman's wife, like the sailor's, "his star shall be," and not alone his star, but as the mother of his children she shall be his equal in opinion and pleasure, in entitlement and decision, as she is in intuitive power and reasonable judgment. Then as one after another the merry hearted children come and mature, the old homestead becomes the scene of many a sportive game, and the abode of youth's most innocent pleasures. The jolly maple sugar party in the spring. The romps of merry haymakers in the summer. The glee of the jack o' lantern in the fall, and the mirth of the big sleigh ride in the winter; these, with the fishing, the hunting and the husking bee, combine to make the farm a place of happy memories "when the other days shall come." And so they come and go, one to the farm, one to the mart of trade, and another—well, she's a daisy queen by nature, and a royal one by virtue, but to a neighbor's lad she looks the loveliest "When coming through the rye." Then I am attracted to the farm by its profitableness, and profitableness is a mighty lever in the hands of a sensible man, and the farm is the place for his fulcrum. I know there is a cry raised now and then about "the poor farmers." Now I understand a poor farmer as an individual, but I never knew farmers, as a class, to be poor. Theirs is the substance of the whole earth. A man living on a place of forty acres, twenty of which is low bush blueberries, and the rest suitably divided between white birch and golden rod, and whose live stock consists of a lame, blind horse, a kicking cow, a hen with a frozen comb, and a rooster without a tail, is no farmer. Say he lives on a place, so do I; but mine is a parsonage. Whereas, the man and the place I am describing is altogether different. He wakes up with the energies of the spring, and turns his stubble into a fruitful field. His orchard blooms in pearly blushes, and his flocks increase with tender lambs; his herds are fat and flourishing, and his hives overflow with honey. He drives a handsome span of "Black Hawk's" pride, at a "top gallant's" speed; his ponds are covered with ducks and geese; while above the roost and the loft filled with fowl and pigeon, sits the king of his birds on the butternut bough, awaiting the nation's festival. From the rude old farm house of his fathers, with rock-ribbed meadows, he has raised a mansion of loveliness, amid fields of beauty.

Another aspect presents the farm as a place of usefulness.

Nowhere on earth is there a better occupancy than on a farm; and nowhere a more useful class of toilers. The race got along very well without the army and navy, the railroad and the factory, but it never got along without the farm. Here physical culture found its first welcome employment, the expansive chest, the bulging muscle, the compact body, all rounded by use into beauty, harmony and power. Here, too, the intellectual and social faculties find ample scope and remuneration. The fine selection of the fittest seeds, plants and trees; their quantity, situation and shape; the arrangement of crops, and the adaptability of soils and fertilizers to them; the choice of stock, literature and association; all these find continuous operation for busy brains and industrious hands, on field and stream, at house and barn, in church and state, from youth to age. Such "a green old age" it was my pleasure to meet, in an adjoining town, during my summer rambles. She was a beautiful old lady of 92 years; mother of six sons and two daughters. She was still occupying the homestead which her busy hands had maintained from her young womanhood, and she still plied her braided cloth so deftly as to make twenty mats since she was 90, besides carrying on her place, making her garden, and keeping a boarder. Any one of her honored family would gladly give her a home, but she prefers to be useful and grow old gracefully, and be remembered for what she has done. I could match her noble character in that of a fine old gentleman of my acquaintance, who, at the same age, still occupies the farm which his youthful labors earned, and from which he has risen as the head of a family, the representative of his town, and the director of a national bank. He is a congenial friend, an intelligent citizen, a liberal supporter of christian institutions, and a christian gentleman; and these are the honorable attractions of the farm.

But there is another attraction grander than any yet named, and that is the independence of the farm. Freedom sits nowhere so natively on the brow of man, as on the freemen of the forest hills. Those hills were God's first temples and freedom's first home, and home is the birthright of the soil. In that endeared spot Liberty enshrines her offspring, and imprints her sacred principles, "For God, and Home, and Native Land." All men are born free, but a double freedom belongs to the husbandman. He can plan for himself, and himself carry out those plans. I can not do that, no other craftsman can do it. Much as I esteem the privilege of addressing your honorable society, I could not do so until asked by your society's board of managers. But no man, nor any number of men, can command you to plant ten acres of corn, and five of barley, or whether you shall plant at all. Neither can any one control your crops when they are raised. You may feed them, or sell them, or give them away. Yours is a perfect choice between one culture and another, and you may devote especial attention to a particular class of stock, or grains, or fruits, and no man say you nay. No boss bosses you. Your vote goes unchallenged and unhindered, as the independent vote of freemen. Oh, the mighty freedom of your homes, your estates, your husbandry. "Ye are God's building." And Jesus Christ gave the highest conception of the kingdom of heaven when He said, "He let it out to husbandmen." I never think of your glorious heritage without wishing that your combined force might be exerted against that vile crop of the wasteful leaf which is so poisonous to our youth, so costly to our families, and so painful to the purer part of mankind. One combined effort on your part would blot the ruinous product from the field, and sweep the filthy nicotine habit from the civilized world. Oh, what mighty possibilities lie within your control. What distinction and honor rest upon you. Free as the birds of your woodlands, which have neither storehouse nor barn; you have neither shortage nor surfiet, but an abundant compensation for all your labors. You sow at your pleasure, and reap at your will, and seed time and harvest never fail. To the preservation of this glorious inheritence, gentlemen of the Housatonic Agricultural Society, the whole unbroken line of your honored ancestry bids you stand guard, and by every impulse and endeavor in your power, lead your goodly host from subjugation to conquest over every form of evil which threatens your homes, your estates, or your sacred institutions. And thus carrying forward the moral reforms of the day for the advancement of civil and religious liberty, you shall make that golden age possible for a future generation so devoutly longed for by the divinest of Judean shepherds "That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace: that our garners may be full, affording all manner of store; that our sheep may bring forth thousands and ten thousands in our streets; that our oxen may be strong to labor; that there be no breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our streets." Happy is the people that is in such a case. Yea, happy is that people whose God is the Lord.

The committee on Early Summer Crops submit the following report: Our department comprises rye, barley and grass, and the attention of the society is called to the fact that the barley crop is not properly classified, but should be placed with the late summer crops. It does not come to maturity in time to give the medium and late-sown pieces a fair showing when it is necessary to inspect the other crops in our division. Many competitors in the rye crop seem to lose sight of the fact that the object of the society in offering premiums is to encourage special effort in the cultivation of crops. Entries were made at random, with no preparation, and though some fields made a fair appearance, they fell short of premiums. The successful competitors sowed from 1½ to 2 bushels per acre on the ground that had been fertilized for a previous crop and in some instances top dressed upon the furrows at the sowing of the rye, and seed and fertilizers harrowed in together. A single instance of sowing upon sod ground secured a premium, the field being plowed in June and sowed in September. It is evident to your committee that 1½ bushels of thoroughly screened seed will produce as good results upon most soil as any other quantity per acre, and the failure to properly prepare the seed sown may account for the very large percentage of false and blighted heads that were found in some of the fields presented for our inspection. The entries of cultivated grass were liberal, but the most favorable returns were made upon fields newly seeded. Older meadows developed in many cases a growth of plaintain and other noxious weeds, which placed them at a disadvantage in the competition. Respectfully submitted.

To the Housatonic Agricultural Society:

I have the honor to report that your committee on the fine art exhibit of 1893 found a marked improvement over 1892. The drawing was much better, and as form must ever precede color, this was a step in the right direction, and should be encouraged in every way possible. Last year there were only a few pieces of china painting over against nearly fifty this year, and two of the collections would have honored any exhibit of Ceramics Oils and water colors were also well represented.

Butter.

Whole number of entries, 22.

Best twenty pounds of Butter, Mrs. Cyrus French, Sheffield, $5 00

The Butter exhibited by me was made from Grade Jersey Cows. The milk was set in a Mosley & Stoddard Creamer for twenty-four hours. Cream ripened until slightly thickened, and churned at 62 deg. temperature. When granular commence to combine, buttermilk drawn off and butter rinsed with cold water; salted three-fourth ounce to the pound with Worcester salt; allowed to stand twelve hours and worked.

MRS. CYRUS FRENCH.

2d do. Mrs. Corodon Downs, New Marlboro, $5 00

The butter exhibited by me was made from the milk of Grade Jersey Cows. Cream raised by the Cooley Creamer; churned while sweet in a Davis Swing Churn, No. 6; salted with Worcester salt, one ounce to a pound of butter and worked thoroughly in a Reid butter-worker.

MRS. CORODON DOWNS.

3d do, George A. Phillips, Egremont, $5 00

My Butter is made the old-fashioned way; milk set in pans; cream churned in a dash churn, and butter worked with a ladle; salted one ounce to the pound. G. A. PHILLIPS.

4th do. Mrs. Jerdon Vosburgh, Sheffield, $4 00

This Butter is made from fourteen cows, grade Jerseys; milk set in shallow pans from twenty-four to thirty-six hours before taking off the cream: churned with the old-fashioned dash churn, using one ounce of salt to the pound. JERDON VOSBURGH.

5th do. Mrs. Walter Miner, Sheffield, $4 00

This Butter was made from Native Cows; the milk was set in common milk pans from twenty-four to thirty-six hours, according to temperature of weather; is churned in crank churn; salted one ounce to the pound with Higgins' salt; worked with hands and packed.

MRS. WALTER MINER.

6th do, Lester T. Osborne, Alford, $4 00

The Butter entered by me was made from the milk of Grade Jersey Cows, and the cream raised by open setting, the milk standing twenty-four hours, and temperature kept at about sixty. The cream is then allowed to ripen, or stand until slightly sour, when it is churned at a temperature of sixty-two. When the butter has come, which it does in ten minutes, on an average, the buttermilk is turned off, and the butter washed with cold water; it is then taken up and salted at the rate of three-fourths of an ounce of Ashton's salt for one pound of butter. Then after standing an hour, or perhaps less, the butter is worked and packed. The cows having the best of feed and care, and all utensils the closest attention.

LESTER T. OSBORNE.

7th do. Mrs. Edgar S. Merrill, Lee, $3 00

The milk was set in a Cooley Creamer twelve hours; temperature of the water, 45 deg.; cream drawn off and kept at a uniform degree of warmth, to prepare it for churning; cream churned at 62 deg. in a Davis Swing Churn. After washing the butter in cold water, it was salted with Ashton's salt, three-fourths of an ounce to a pound, and worked on a butter-worker the following day.

MRS. E. S. MERRILL.

8th do. Mrs. John Supple, Great Barrington, $3 00

This Butter was made from Grade and Native Cows; the milk was set in common milk pans; skimmed and churned in a Blanchard churn; salted one ounce to the pound.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

A few facts in addition to those appearing in the preceding pages should be here recorded. The after-harvest fair, with its broadening and stimulating influence, is not the only service of the Agricultural Society. At other times, and in other ways, the organization may and does exert its activities and confer its benefits. A very important and essential part of the society's work is the dissemination of knowledge on practical questions, and the opportunity for investigation and discussion afforded by the Farmers' Institutes. Of these, three at least are required to be held in each calendar year. The Institutes in 1893 were of profit to the comparatively few who attended them.

The first Institute was held at the Town Hall, in Great Barrington, on January 4th, and was devoted to the subject of "Village and Wayside Improvement." About seventy-five farmers were present. The subject was introduced by P. A. Russell, and discussion followed in which the following gentlemen participated: M. I. Wheeler, James Bullard, F. A. Palmer, H. L. Smith, M. S. Heath, H. W. Sheldon, Levi Beebe and Alonzo Bradley.

A second Institute was held in the same place on January 17th, Dr. George M. Twitchell, of Augusta, Me., delivering an address on the subject: "The Horse of To-morrow — Where shall we find it?" This address, which was of unusual merit, was published in full in the BERKSHIRE COURIER of January 19th. About one hundred and fifty were present.

On February 28th a third Institute was held in the Court-Room, Great Barrington, at which an able and interesting lecture, illustrated by papier-mache models, was delivered by Prof. J. B. Paige, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, on the subject of the "Anatomy, Functions and Diseases of the Horse's Hoof."

As an item of historical interest, a reunion of the officers and ex-officers of the Housatonic Agricultural Society occurred on January 4th, in connection with the Berkshire Farmers' Festival, under the successful management of ex-President A. L. Hubbell. This was the first banquet held in the new "Berkshire Inn."

Very little need be said here of the annual fair. A hard, pouring rain during the forenoon of the third day prevented — what otherwise was promised — a great year for the treasury. The receipts shown by the Treasurer's report to be derived from the grand stand, during this its second year of service, emphasize the wisdom of the society in investing capital in that structure, and suggest the advantage of further similar enterprise. The customary baloon ascension was dispensed with this year, and an effort was made to provide in its place a series of attractions that would furnish more varied and continuous entertainment. Base-ball games were arranged for the mornings of the first and third days; trick oxen and colts, trick bicyclist and comedy bar performers were secured, and a variety of races and sports given; also special exhibits of interest from the Bloodgood and Montevideo Stock Farms.

The horse-trotting feature this year proved a comparative failure. This was due, in part, to the bad weather of the third day, and in part to the fact that the society has not kept pace with its sister societies in the inducements offered in this department. The success of the society financially depends in great measure upon its attractions, and of the attractions the trotting is the principal feature of the last two days of the fair. We think the society should make an effort to increase the number of entries and the number of starters in each race, and as an incentive to this larger purses should be offered. The department of trotting should be placed in the hands of a committee to be appointed at the annual meeting, who should give this subject intelligent and practical attention from a business stand-point.

O. C. BIDWELL, Secretary.

Reports of Committes.

Early Summer Crops.

Whole number of entries, 94. Four acres of Rye, 27; one acre of Rye, 41; five acres of Grass, 11; three acres of Grass, 15.

Your committee on Early Summer Crops commenced their examination June 26th, and completed the work in nine days. There were entries in thirteen towns — there being none north of Pittsfield. We made a thorough examination of each piece of Rye and Grass. The growth of rye was very large. We found pieces where the stalks of rye were six feet and upward in height, and the heads were well filled. Very few pieces were lodged or struck with rust. We found a vast difference in opinion as to the quantity of seed to be used per acre. The seed used varied all the way from one bushel to four and one-half per acre. We think both extremes ought to be avoided. The quantity of seed used on the pieces that received the premiums was from a bushel and a half to two bushels per acre. If seeding down is done with grain, we think rye is preferable to oats, because rye does not draw so heavily on the fertility of the land.

The Grass crop was badly effected by the dry weather, although the premium pieces were very heavy. The work we have completed has been a great school to us. We would express our thanks to the society for the appointment given us, and to the different families for the hospitality extended. We would award the following:

Best four acres of Winter Rye, M. I. Wheeler, Great Barrington,	$6 00

Late Summer Crops.

Whole number of entries, 66. Oats, 31 entries. Your committee commenced their examination July 26. We were disappointed, after such a severe drouth, to find so large a list of entries. The crop suffered from late frosts or a blight which was thought by many to have ruined the crop completely, but they outgrew the blight and we harvested a fair crop in South Berkshire. The growth of straw was short with heads long and very large. The best pieces we examined were planted with a machine with 2½ bushels of seed sowed to the acre. We advise farmers to use more care in selecting seed. Some pieces we viewed showed so much charlock and thistles we did not consider them worthy of a premium.

Barley, 6 entries. Barley we found to be an average crop, we saw but few pieces on our trip except those entered for premium. It is considered an excellent crop to seed with grass.

Ensilage, 13 entries. The variety raised was mostly Southern White. The growth was very large for the season, some stalks measuring fifteen feet in length. Your committee came to the conclusion that the best results are obtained by having the rows 3½ feet apart, with about six inches space between stalks; with that way of planting each stalk would mature and nearly every one would have a short ear.

Sowed corn, 16 entries. We found all varieties except pop-corn, and a great difference in culture. The executive committee should draw the line distinctly between ensilage and sowed corn, that competitors may know in what class to make their entries. We would restrict sowed corn to the sweet varieties alone; we would recommend all dairymen to raise a sufficient quantity for late summer and fall feeding. The past season has proved beyond a doubt its value.

In closing our report we thank those who kindly entertained us in our dusty travels with the mercury among the nineties. Our awards were as follows:

Best four acres of Oats, J. A. Kline, Egremont,	$6 00

JOHN B. HULL, ALBERT H. STICKLES, } Committee.

STOCKBRIDGE, MASS., November 5, 1894.

The Chairman of the Committee on Fall Crops, having held the list of entries some two weeks, returned it to the Secretary, whereupon the undersigned was drafted in his place. This delay made our examination so late that many of the crops were harvested, but we were cordially received everywhere, and our apology accepted.

We expected to find but few crops worthy of premiums; owing to the unprecedented drought, but in this we were happily disappointed. The farmers reported their early crops, as fully up to the average, while there were many of the fall crops of such excellence as to deserve many more premiums than were at our disposal.

Of the crops weighed, most of the premiums on corn, were taken by 70 to 80 pounds per rod, and some crops of potatoes of more than 450 bushels per acre, could receive no award. What was true of the above was equally true of the crops not weighed. (It is fair to admit that our weights were, for rods, better than the average.)

One competitor, who had followed the advice of Horace Greeley, and gone West, reported that in Kansas, he had planted 35 acres of corn, and the same of wheat, and had raised 70 acres of grasshoppers, but not a kernel of either kind of grain. He did not report by what means he was able to return to the old homestead, but if he borrowed the money, he can repay from a 512 bushel crop of potatoes, and other crops to match.

There are many varieties of potatoes that seem to produce about equal crops, but in corn, the Small Dutton, and in buckwheat, the Japanese took all the preminms.

The writer learned that his ability to pay more for harvesting a crop of buckwheat than he could get for the grain, resulted from sowing the old variety. Your committee were everywhere cordially entertained, even where crops had been harvested before our visit, and we found the best product of the farm, not in the field or barn, but in the happy home.

JOHN B. HULL, FOR THE COMMITTEE.

There seems to be a few suggestions to be made in this department of Art, which would lead to a great improvement in its exhibitions. First, the place itself could be fitted up tastefully and conveniently at small expence. Then, with a little effort, more of our artists might be induced to bring in their work, and help to educate us all to a better knowledge of art. Let us try another year to see what can be done. Fruits.

LANESBOROUGH, MASS., October 25, 1894.

The fruit at your fair was the finest I ever saw. In awarding the premiums I did not have time to do as I would have liked. The book of entries was late in getting into my hands, and being obliged to return home the same day, my time was made rather short. Your exhibit might be made still better if you were to offer premiums on the various leading varieties of apples. I would suggest that premiums be offered for new varieties and collections, not exceeding twelve varieties. Also, that exhibitors be required to exhibit uniform numbers of specimens. Respectfully, S. W. DOW.

As expert on Durhams, perhaps a few remarks in this capacity will not be untimely. It has too often been the practice at our agricultural fairs for the committee or expert on cattle even, after properly considering their essential points, to be almost exclusively influenced in their decision by the animal's general appearance. Virtually this is all that has been required, and there is but little doubt that this qualification has won more first premiums than all others combined.

No matter how thoroughly qualified a person is, even with the score-card, there are many essential points highly valued by the breeder which cannot be duly estimated in the show ring. Such as quiet and gentleness in the stable, being a pleasant milker, quality and quantity of milk, good feeders, good and sure breeders, freedom from garget, quiet and orderly in the pasture, etc. An animal or cow possessing these qualifications in a satisfactory degree has the conditions for being first-class, yet not one of these can be satisfactorily considered in their examination in the show ring.

Then, again, the committee, in most cases, is expected by the society to be so thorough in their examination as to pass unerring judgment, and that, too, on scores of cattle in three or four hours of time. This kind of judging is anticipated by the society each year through their expert; but alas, since thoroughbred cattle predominate at the fairs, the breeders now require a more considerate and discriminating examination — hence the score-cards required by the State Board of Agriculture of Massachusetts. At present one objection to judging by score-cards is a lack of uniformity in application by different judges. From experience, I find this in its favor: It requires a thorough, systematic examination of every section, and thus credit is given only as merit requires. The result shows the position of each animal. This method, when properly applied, is an educator to the breeder.

It is a common remark that the bull is one-half of the herd. This may be an exaggeration. I think, however, it is safe to say that the bull is equal to two cows. In either case, why would it not be policy to have a specimen of the bull's progeny to be exhibited with the bull the same as the cow is required to have a specimen of her progeny exhibited with her?

What would best please the exhibitors, and what the society is aiming to accomplish, is to have the awards made in strict justice. It is not only the money value of the awards which is appreciated, but the awards themselves, backed by the society and so discreetly made as to give them character. Then there is honor and not a little pride in receiving their justly-awarded prizes.

In judging the Jerseys I found the task to be difficult, yet it gave me pleasure to see so many fine animals, and your society may be proud of the display the Jersey breeders are making annually at the fair. As this exhibit nearly equals that of State fairs, it would be well to adopt their system more fully in classing: First, that a bull should be included with the four females to constitute a herd. Second, as there is no provision made for the superior breeding of an animal, I would advise awarding an extra prize for aged bull with four or five of his get. This will give a valuable animal, which may be faulty in form, an opportunity to show his worth at a small outlay of the society. I believe this would be very beneficial. E. L. VAN DEUSEN, Committee.

We commenced our duties with considerable trepidation, it being our debut as an "expert:" but we had been very politely asked to tell what we knew about Ayrshires and leave out what we did not know, and had agreed to do it. We found "no retreat in that war." Thus, with score-cards in one hand and pencil in the other, we began to make our mark "not in the world," but on the score-card. After going around and around within the circle where nineteen head of Ayrshires were standing, nearly all very good-looking animals, and marking and again marking, we were more than happy that we found one end of our pencil had a rubber upon it, which we used at nearly every bout. Please bear in mind that we were not quite so verdant in the wholesale, general appearance of Ayrshire Stock as with the compulsory score-card, having handled daily, for nearly a score of years, this excellent breed of cattle, and score-cards only for a few hours; but the State Board said cards must be used, our worthy executive committee said the same, and there were no excuses to be heard, whereof we were glad.

We learned this, which we give to others. With the present-adopted mode of judging, one may differ very materially from his impressions and conscientious judgment by a general survey other than scoring. Also, we learned that a quite ordinary-looking animal, in a general way, may possibly climb well up by the card to the maximum of one hundred points. Were this not correct two or three of the animals would have received no award from us. We find no rule or mode of judging infallible. Experts have no councillors: they must go it alone, and when questioned by the curious why do ye so, be ready for the reply.

Evidently scoring has come to stay, and no wrangling over the question will avail anything. Study and experience is very essential to become an expert in fact. Our best reward for the duty assigned us was the apparent satisfaction of the competitors.

The whole number of Guernsey cattle entered in the different classes were 26, 24 of which were shown by Wheeler and Beckwith of Great Barrington, Rowley of Egremont, Hart of Monterey, and Ballou of Becket. In aged Bulls, two noble specimens were shown by Beckwith and Ballou. The best feature of the display was the stock shown by Wheeler, which, for size of animals and excellence of points, easily surpassed all others in their respective classes, he showing a Cow 17 years old, and to all appearances as vigorous and sound as some are at 10. Judging from some of her progeny shown, she is a most remarkable creature. This, in my opinion, is the way to lay the foundation for a herd, and I most earnestly call attention to this fact to every progressive farmer. Start with only the very best and keep your herd so, and never inbreed. I would also recommend the Guernseys for the general-purpose animal.

I do most emphatically endorse the score-card for use in judging all standard breeds of cattle, for by it a judge can arrive at his conclusions with more certainty, and then there is no getting around hard facts. While I do not suppose any two judges would score the same animal just alike, the result of both will correspond very nearly when summed up as a whole. Then, again, no man can judge a certain number of animals by the eye alone, for the one selected will not meet his expectations when judged by card, and he almost invariably overlooks some more worthy one in the flock, and therefore he is never positively sure he has done justice to every one.

Finally, if any competitor is dissatisfied with his decision, the difference between two or more animals is more readily explained by the card, for he must be very ignorant who cannot see what his animal scores before leaving home, and should know within a few points what the result would be at the exhibition.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The first in the series of Farmers' Institutes of 1894, under the auspices of the society, was held in the District Court room, Great Barrington, on February 1st. On this occasion the society was fortunate in securing Hon. William R. Sessions, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, who delivered an entertaining and instructive address on the subject of "Obstacles to Successful Farming and How to Overcome Them, with Some Thoughts on the Public Duties of Farmers." The address was followed by discussion, in which M. I. Wheeler, W. H. Day, B. F. Phillips, C. B. Benedict and F. A. Palmer participated.

A second Institute was held at the same place, on February 20th, at the morning session of which the subject of "Cattle Hygiene, Housing, Care and Feeding" was presented by Mr. James Cheeseman of Southborough, Mass., followed by an afternoon session of discussion.

At each of these Institutes the room was well filled, and marked interest manifested in the exercises.

On December 6th will be held the third and last Institute of 1894, at which it is now expected that the Hon. S. A. Hickox of South Williamston will deliver the address. Subject — "Dairying as a Business."

These speakers are sent us and their expenses paid by the State, under the supervision of the State Board of Agriculture. The subjects discussed are of a practical nature, and the meetings prove of value to those who attend them. The benefits would be greatly extended by a more general attendance on the part of the members of the society.

The society has invested considerable money the past year in improvements at the Fair Grounds. The main exhibition hall, which had stood practically unchanged since its erection in 1856, was lowered to the ground, moved thirteen and one-half feet to the west and enlarged by an extension at the north end forty-eight feet in length. These changes were made after careful deliberation by the Executive Committee under authority conferred at the last annual meeting of the society, and immediate results were recognized at the fair in a marked improvement in the general attractiveness of the hall exhibits.

The fair this year gave assurance of the fact that there is no abatement of interest in our annual gatherings. The exhibition in the various departments of domestic animals and poultry was up to the standard of recent years, and in the hall exhibits — especially in fruit and in the ladies' departments — advancement was made. The weather was good on all three days and the attendance very large. Special attractions were secured, consisting of trick bicyclist, juggler, strong man, contortionist, base ball games on Wednesday and Friday mornings, foot-ball game on Thursday afternoon, and numerous kinds of sports and races which contributed elements of variety and novelty to the programme.

Special efforts on the part of the trotting committee, together with the enlarged purses, made the trotting events of unusual merit as attractions. The hall exercises on the third day were rendered of particular interest and value by a practical talk on "Law for Farmers" by Judge Justin Dewey. The exhibits by the merchants developed into unusual proportions this year and furnished an attractive feature of the fair.

Improvements still remain to be made all along the line. The changes in the premium list, which have been recommended after careful consideration by the Executive Committee, it is believed, will result in stimulating the interest in certain departments. The necessity of further improvements on the Fair Grounds has been emphasized the past year. The grand stand should be enlarged. Further investment in this structure will bear large interest. and its present dimensions have proved entirely inadequate to the call upon it. Another tier of box stalls should be built on the east side of the track. This investment, also, while supplying a crying need, will bear interest, as the stalls can be rented throughout the season at fair-paying rates. Action should be taken at the annual meeting to supply these wants.

The society is to be congratulated that it possesses the loyal interest of all classes in the community, and should make every endeavor to deserve their continued co-operation.

O. C. BIDWELL,
Secretary.

ADDRESS

Delivered Before the Housatonic Agricultural Society at the Annual Exhibition, September 27, 1895.

By H. C. JOYNER.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Housatonic Agricultural Society;

In his very able and interesting address delivered to your society last year, his Honor, Judge Dewey, explained what the law is, especially in reference to the owners, occupants and tillers of the soil. I propose to tell you not what the law is, but what it should be in reference to two subjects, two subjects of such transcendent importance that I shall hardly attempt a detailed discussion. Upon one of these subjects the maintenance of all government depends. Through the exercise of the other popular government exists.

Every owner of land, whether his possessions are situated on the barren peak of the Dome, or in the fertile meadows by the winding Housatonic, is certain each year of one product, the annual tax bill. The first subject, then, to which I refer is taxation, a subject that in the popular sense of the word is interesting to no one, but which so affects everyone that it has passed into a proverb, "There is no escape from death or taxes." The English speaking people from their earliest history have been jealous of the govenment's prerogative to tax and have carefully scrutinized the laws of taxation. John Hampden and his followers refused to pay the few pence of ship tax and thereby precipitated a revolution that overthrew the throne of Charles the First and brought the monarch to the block. The history of Ireland for centuries is but the record of the struggle of a brave people against what they claim is extortionate tax imposed for the support of an alien church and government. The refusal to pay an almost nominal tax, assessed illegally, because without representation in Parliament, created the Revolution through which the Independence of our country was achieved.

The Constitution of our own Commonwealth was created in the midst of the Revolution, while the roar of the cannon was still heard and the smoke of battle was still seen. It was created by men, some of whom, perhaps, had been of the "Boston Tea Party," or had stood shoulder to shoulder at Bunker Hill. Naturally these men at such a time, under such circumstances, created a Constitution and ordained a State to be forever known as they said, as the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in which the right of the government to impose taxes was distinctly defined, and that which could be taxed and how it should be taxed was accurately pointed out. The substance of the provisions of this the fundamental law of State upon the subject of taxation, is: "No tax ought to be established without the consent of the people, or their representatives." "Taxes upon all the inhabitants, * * * persons * * * and estates * * * lying within the Commonwealth are to be proportional and reasonable." "Public charges * * * shall be assessed on polls and estates * * * with equality." All taxes shall be equal, proportional, and only assessed by authority of the duly elected representatives of the people. By equal taxation is plainly meant that a thousand dollars' worth of property in the hands of A shall be taxed the same as an equal amount of property in the hands of B; and by proportional taxation is as plainly meant that if A have ten times as much property as B, his tax shall be ten times as great. There is no provision in this grand old Constitution of the Commonwealth for tax exemption; all property everywhere within the State, protected by the State, is to contribute towards the support of the government of the State. Neither was there provided in the Constitution any snug little haven for the tax dodger. Everywhere within the wide confines of the Commonwealth the tax laws were to reach, omnipresent as the sunlight. We search too, in vain, every provision of this our Magna Charta for one word giving support to the doctrine that real estate rather than personal estate is to bear any more than its proportionate share of the burdens of government.

Turn now from the Constitution to the Statute. From the foundation of our taxlaws to the superstructure under which taxes are actually imposed. You will note with surprise, perhaps, that much more space is taken in the Statute in pointing out the property that shall not be taxed at all than is taken to designate the property that shall be taxed. You will further observe that the tax on the farm and on all real estate is made a first charge or lien that must be paid in spite of mortgage or other incumbrance and from which not even the homestead is exempt, while the tax on personal estate is given no lien at all, and a thousand dollars' worth of personal property in the form of household furniture is carefully exempt from taxation. In other words the house is taken but the furniture left. These are straws, but they show the current of our legislation. The current is flowing rapidly towards the doctrine of no tax for personal estate, all tax for real estate. I have heard this doctrine more than once openly advocated in the State House at Boston. Said a speaker on one of these occasions: "There should be written in letters of gold over the door of the State House, 'Never tax property which has power to run away. Only tax that which cannot run.'" This single tax and that tax upon the farm and the home is certainly of interest to the farmer and the owner of real estate.

Note further how this doctrine of the exemption of personal property has already taken possession of the Statute law of Massachusetts.

Thirty-four years ago the Federal Government, to meet the exigencies of a great war, issued its bonds or promissory notes to the amount of many millions of dollars, and provided that they should be exempt from all taxation. The contagion of this exemption is one of the sad legacies of that war. It is the precedent and the pretext for exempting money when loaned on interest everywhere from taxation. Municipal bonds, railroad bonds, promissory notes of private parties, deposits in savings banks, deposits in national banks, all clamor for relief from sharing the burdens of government. Stocks, bonds, books of accounts, bills of exchange, all securities that are most easily destroyed or stolen and have greatest need of the protection of government, refuse to contribute to its support. In 1881 what is known as the Mortgage Exemption Law was passed. Upon its face a harmless piece of legislation, a trifling amendment to a few sections of the Public Statutes, its consequences have been tremendous. It was passed under the fraudulent claim that it relieve borrowers, prevent double taxation and reduce rates of interest. The result has been the reverse. The tax which every borrower of money has had to pay has been increased and the rates of interest have not been affected, the interest rate depending, as it always must, upon the demand for, and supply of money. It is impossible to ascertain the amount of property that this law relieves from the burden of bearing its equal and proportionate share of taxes. It is estimated by millions.

Consider the absurdity and injustice of this law. A gives his promissory note to B for $1,000 for money borrowed. While B holds this note without a particle of security and of course doubtful value, it is subject to taxation. But let A secure this same note by mortgage on real estate, making it fully worth a hundred cents on the dollar and it is exempt from taxation. Could the law of taxation be more absurd than this? But look at the injustice of it. A has bought a farm for $10,000. He is able to make a cash payment of but $2,000. He owes for all the rest. He is taxed the full assessed value of his farm. B with $10,000, or even $50,000, at interest secured by mortgage, pays only a poll tax. This was not the law for a hundred years after the constitution was made. Ought it longer to be the law of Massachusetts? Will the farmers and real estate owners of the Commonwealth long submit to this sneaking exemption. The future will tell.

There is another exemption in the Statute, a relic of the tyranny of the past. In the early days of the State the Church was maintained, like the School, at the expense of the public, in other words, there was the established or State Church; as the School house and Highway are exempt from taxation because they are the property of the public, so the Church was exempt for the same reason. When the Church was divorced from the State the reason ceased to exist and the Church should, with proud independence, have taken its place with the honest taxpayers. I make no attack upon the Church. The clustered spires of the village rising white amid green foliage of the trees are everywhere a thing of beauty; but to my eye they would be more beautiful if they paid their equal and proportionate share of the burden of maintaining the government that gives them everywhere within its domain the largest liberty of existence. Understand, the Statute does not exempt the Christian Church alone. The Church of the Christian, the Synagogue of the Jew, the Temple of the Mormon, the Mosque of the Moslem, the Pagoda of the Celestial, everything that calls itself religion can claim exemption for its buildings, land on which they stand and furniture, even though the amount rises as it does in some single instances in the Commonwealth to a valuation greater than that of the wealthy town of Great Barrington. One of the most sagacious and patriotic Presidents of the United States, Gen. Grant, called attention, in his annual message to Congress more than twenty years ago, to the immense amount of property that escaped taxation under the exemption of property devoted to religious worship.

We boast that in Massachusetts there is absolute freedom of religious opinion; that no citizen is compelled by law to support a Church whose creed his conscience does not approve. Freedom to worship or not worship is the unalienable right of all. In fact, every taxpayer in Massachusetts is compelled by legal process, when he pays his tax, to aid in the support not only of the Church, but of every system of religion that owns a house of religious worship, or so-called religious worship, within the limits of the State. The exemption of the Church from taxation is a violation of the principle of religious freedom. It is incompatible with Republican government. It is a relic of the cruel past. It increases the burdens of the already overburdened taxpayers. Let the Church stand independent of the State, separate from the civil government and without compulsory aid, direct or indirect.

The law ought to be that all property, real and personal, of every name and nature, shall pay its equal and proportionate tax.

No tax ought to be established without the consent of the people. How is that consent expressed? Not by proxy, not by substitutes, manifestly by the individual through the ballot box.

The second subject of which I speak, then, is the right of suffrage. The right to vote and the right to be taxed have ever been considered in Massachusetts as co-extensive. It is true that the prepayment of a tax is no longer essential to the casting of a ballot, but the right to cast a ballot must be proved in every instance by showing that the elector is a taxpayer. The taxpayer only under our law is entitled to a voice in the Government. This results from the devotion of our people to the principle that taxation and representation go hand in hand. The citizen without voice in the government is not represented. You can never know his will except as he is permitted to express it when casting a vote. It is said that in Massachusetts the people rule, the ballot is free and this is the best government in the world because the whole people are wiser than any one and wiser than any privileged few. We find fault with some of the sister States of the Republic because, as we allege, they deny a free ballot and a fair count without distinction of race or color. By the law of Massachusetts we enfranchise the felon who has served out his sentence, even the murderer who has been pardoned, and deny the ballot to an intelligent, conscientious tax paying citizen because of sex. What ought the law of Massachusetts be on this subject? Before answering the question I will read the following:

Enacted by the Massachusetts Legislature, June, 1895.

SECTION I — All persons qualified to vote for School Committee shall, at the next State election, have an opportunity to express their opinion by voting yes or no in answer to the following question: "Is it expedient that municipal suffrage be granted to women?"

SECTION II—Equal opportunity shall be given to men and women to register prior to said election.

Believing it to be for the best interest of the Commonwealth that men and women should share equally the responsibilities of its government, we hereby urge the women of Massachusetts to respond to the invitation of the Legislature, as set forth in the Act of 1895, by registering and voting in favor of Municipal Suffrage for women.

And we ask all legal voters to consider seriously that, while Massachusetts is now governed by an aristocracy based strictly on sex, it is possible, by voting in the affirmative under this law, to insure "a government of the (whole) people, by the (whole) people, for the (whole) people."

These are names of which Massachusetts is justly proud, but more illustrious names can be given of those who have dared to stand out in advance of their times as champions of an intelligent ballot for all without distinction of sex. More than forty years ago Massachusetts' most illustrious thinker, Ralph Waldo Emerson, declared his faith in the Woman's Rights cause. The martyred President, Abraham Lincoln, in the midst of his crowded life, found time to express his belief in the ballot for women. This cause need not lean for support upon authority. Its foundations are more enduring than the opinions of men or women. They exist in the great principle upon which our Republic is founded, that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed. Standing on this principle we ask, "Why should not Municipal Suffrage be granted to women?"

One objector answers, "Because women are not the equals, intellectually, of men." As a man perhaps I must concede this premise to be correct. Of course, Julia Ward Howe is not as great a poet as Oscar Wilde. Elizabeth Barrett Browning was not the peer of Martin Tupper. George Eliot was inferior to G. P. R. James. Does this prove anything? Do we base the right to vote upon intellectual superiority?

Says another, "Men and women may be equal, but they are different, intellectually." President Eliot, of Harvard, is different, intellectually, from Mr. Patrick McGuire, the great political boss; Josiah Quincy is different from John L. Sullivan; Benjamin Harrison differs from Stephen Elkins; but these men are all alike qualified to vote, and often they vote in the same party.

Says another, "The women are really represented, their will is expressed through the votes of husbands, fathers, brothers. The ballot in the hands of women will simply duplicate the number of votes without changing the result!" Are we quite sure of this? In 1882 the Democratic party in Massachusetts in its State Convention declared in favor of an intelligent ballot for all, without regard to sex, race, or color. Of course those of us who supported that party at once began to discuss the situation. Talking one day with a fellow-Democrat, I said, "After all, what is the objection to letting the women vote if they want to?" His answer was almost literally this: "If the women vote it will carry every town in Massachusetts for no-license."

It is said, too, that if the women vote and vote contrary to the wishes of husbands it will make differences in the family. Can there really be anything in this? Are political opinions held as tenaciously as religious opinions? Does the fact that the wife may hold and express religious opinions that differ from those of her husband destroy the family? Has it ever been argued in a Christian land that a woman should not hold and express views for herself in matters of religion?

It may be said things are well enough as they are, full justice is done with the ballot confined to men. True, great changes have been made in the laws affecting the rights of women, and changes for the better. A few years ago a man married a wife worth a hundred thousand dollars, he being penniless himself. By the act of marriage the law, as it then stood, transferred her whole property to him. He owned the one hundred thousand dollars, she was penniless. Perhaps his good fortune was too much for his constitution. In a brief time he sickened, and when about to die made his will, disposing of this hundred thousand dollars. He generously gave his wife the use of it as long as she should remain his widow.

To-day a woman may be possessed of property in her own right. She wills it to a dependent sister and mother, that when she is gone the dependent relatives may not want. She marries. By the act of marriage, as the law now stands, her will is revoked. She dies. Her dependent relatives are left penniless, while her husband consoles himself with the possession of her whole estate, if it is not large, and this in spite of her will or wishes.

Was there ever a lawyer who did not blush to tell a trembling, anxious mother that she had not an equal right to her babe with its drunken father. The lawyer must tell this if he tells the truth. I know that in administering the law the courts are more humane than the law itself, and often give the child to the mother as against the father, but I know equally well, as does every lawyer, that the common law still holds the right of the father to the child, even the babe in the cradle, as above and superior to that of the mother.

But suppose we concede that the men of the Commonwealth do naturally exercise the right of suffrage for the best interest of all. What has that to do with the principle? Because a wise king may rule more wisely during his life than the whole people of a Republic, must we, therefore, concede that Monarchy is preferable to Democracy? For the last forty years the Republicans have controlled the Legislature of Massachusetts and made the laws of the Commonwealth. Would not Democrats think it impertinent if the Republicans should now say: "You see we have done well when long tried. Why not you Democrats stop voting and leave to us exclusively this voting business?"

The year has come when the voters of Massachusetts will have an opportunity to declare whether or not they desire Municipal Suffrage for women? Farmers, are not your interests with the affirmative of this question? Do you not feel the need often in town government of intelligent, conscientious, conservative votes? Many of the old homesteads are deserted, others are occupied by newcomers, well-meaning people, perhaps, but many of them unacquainted with your institutions, your history, with Republican Government. Where can you look for support in that practice of stern economy, that thoughtful, considerate management of Municipal affairs that has ever been the glory and credit of the New England town meeting except in the votes of your wives and daughters. Try them. You have found their counsels valuable in the family, the School and the Church, why not in the towns. Do you say, "The women know nothing of politics or town business." The ballot box is the great educator of the voter. Responsibility begets ability. Have you never seen a feeble, seemingly mindless wife, suddenly left a widow and noticed how she has risen to the occasion, sagacious, wise? Give the women the ballot in the town meetings and they will soon learn all that it is needful to learn of town affairs, all that is worth knowing of politics.

Women, your votes will drop in the common ballot box with the men's. Your "yes" or "no" may be drowned as it were in the common ballot. It would seem to have been simple justice to submit this question to the women alone, but the men, the Legislators, who always deal so justly with their sisters, have framed this law.

Women, do not let this deter you from voting. Your wishes will be known just in proportion to the numbers who vote. Every woman, twenty-one years of age, who can read and write, who has resided in the Commonwealth a year and in the town where she offers to vote six months, and who is a citizen, is qualified to vote. No prepayment of a tax is required, but you must not only be qualified you must be registered. The second Saturday before election will be the last day to register. Do not fail to register and then vote or not as you will; and vote "yes" or "no" as you will. If you believe that all just government derives its powers from the consent of the governed, if you believe that a taxpayer should have a voice in disposing of the tax that is paid, if you believe that women should have the same right to her earnings as a man, should have the same opportunities for employment as a man, should have the right to dispose of her property by deed or will as a man, that the mother should have the same right to the control of her child as the father, then you will stand erect and vote "yes." But if you believe that women are not as good as pardoned felons, that they should be classed with paupers, lunatics and idiots, then bow your head, veil your face and vote "no."

The law of Suffrage should be: Crime not sex shall disfranchise; a free ballot for every honest, intelligent citizen.

Here are some fragments of a poem that tell the story of an Oriental monarch, absolute in power, but wretched in his loneliness, who sent for his youthful bride. Of her coming, her song, and its lesson the verse will tell us:

As comes the moon from out the sea with her attendant breeze,
As sweeps the morning up the hills and blossoms in the trees,
So Nourmahal to Selim came; then fell upon her knees!

The envious jewels looked at her with chill, barbaric stare,
The cloth of gold she knelt upon grew lustreless and bare,
And all the place was cooler in the darkness of her hair.

And while she knelt in queenly pride and beauty strange and wild,
And held her breast with both her palms and looked on him and smiled,
She seemed no more of common earth, but Casyapa's child.

He bent to her as thus she smiled; he kissed her lifted cheek;
"Oh, Nourmahal," he murmured low, "more dear than I can speak, I'm weary of my lonely life; give me the rest I seek."

She rose and paced the silken floor, as if in mad caprice,
Then paused, and from the Empress changed to improvisatrice,
And wove this song—a golden chain—that led him into peace:

"Lovely children of the light,
Draped in radiant locks and pinions—
Red and purple, blue and white
In their beautiful dominions
On the earth and in the spheres,
Dwell the little glendoveers.

"And the red can know no change,
And the blue are blue forever,
And the yellow wings may range
Toward the white or purple never,
But they mingle free from strife,
For their color is their life.

"In the days long gone, alas!
Two upon a cloud, low-seated,
Saw their pinions in the glass
Of a silvery lake repeated,
One was blue and one was red,
And the lovely pair were wed.

"'Purple wings are very fine,'
Spoke the voice of Ruby, gently;
'Ay,' said Sapphire, 'they're divine!'
Looking at his blue intently.
'But to wish for a change is vain,'
Ruby said: 'We'll not complain.'

"Rapture passed, they raised their eyes,
But were startled into clamor
Of a marvelous surprise!
Was it color? Was it glamor?
Purple tinted, sweet and warm,
Was each wing and folded form!

"Who had wrought it—how it came—
These were what the twain disputed,
How were mingled smoke and flame
Into royal hue transmuted?
Each was right and each was wrong,
But their quarrel was not long.

"For the moment that their speech
Differed o'er their little story,
Swiftly faded off from each
Every trace of purple glory.
Blue was bluer than before,
And the red was red once more.

"Then they knew that both were wrong,
And in sympathy of sorrow
Learned that each was only strong
In the power to lend and borrow.
That the purple never grew
But by grace of red to blue.

"And for twice a thousand years,
Floating through the radiant ether,
Lived the happy glendoveers,
Of the other jealous, neither.
Sapphire naught without the red,
Ruby still by blue bested."

As from its dimpled fountain, at its own capricious will,
Each step a note of music and each fall and flash a thrill;
The rill goes singing to the meadow levels and is still.

So fell from Nourmahal her song upon the captive sense;
It dashed in spray against the throne, it tinkled through the tents,
And died at last among the flowery banks of recompense.

For when great Selim marked her fire, and read her riddle well,
And watched her from the flushing to the fading of the spell,
He sprang forgetful from his seat and caught her as she fell.

He raised her in his tender arms; he bore her to his throne;
"No more, oh, Nourmahal, my wife; no more I rule alone;
And the future for the dreary past shall royally atone!"

He called to him the princes and the nobles of the land,
Then took the signet ring from his, and placed it on her hand,
And bade them honor as his own fair Nourmahal's command.

And on the minted silver that his largess scattered wide,
And on the gold of commerce, till the mighty Selim died,
Her name and his in shining boss stood equal, side by side.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Early Summer Crops.

Whole number of entries, 49. Four acres of Rye, 15; one acre of Rye, 20; five acres of Grass, 6; three acres of Grass, 8.

Your committee commenced their examination July 1. No entries north of Pittsfield. We found no poor pieces of Rye, every piece was good, the four acre pieces better than the one; that we did not expect. We found that one bushel and one-half sowed with a grain drill was better than two bushels sowed by hand. We would advise farmers to use Commercial fertilizers when they sow their Rye; say 300 pounds per acre, if they haven't barnyard manure.

Grass — the entries tell the story. We found some good pieces, only one that was seeded last year, and that was extra good. We think farmers ought to pay more attention to grass.

In closing we thank those who kindly entertained us. Our awards were as follows:

Late Summer Crops.

Whole number of entries, 85. Four acres of Oats, 17; one acre of Oats, 18; one acre of Barley, 4; piece of Sowed Corn of Sweet Variety, 12; one-half acre Sowed Corn, 11; best piece Ensilage Corn, 23.

The last week in July your committee made their first trip to examine the Oat and Barley crops. The entries on these crops were scattered through ten towns. We found a heavy growth of oat straw and well filled. Many pieces were badly twisted and lodged by the storm of the week previous.

The horse-mane or side oat seems to be largely raised. It has a stiff straw that stands up well and yields well, the grain yielding nearly forty pounds per bushel. Three bushels of Oats per acre is enough for best results, if sown evenly. We think some should take more pains in sowing, especially if sown by hand.

We again started on Wednesday, Aug. 21, to look at Ensilage and Sowed Corn, and finished our work on these crops in four days.

Ensilage Corn we found everywhere heavy, while occasionally a piece showed some effects of drought. We found every variety of Corn raised for Ensilage — Sweet, Flint, and Dent or Southern White, the latter 15 feet tall.

Your committee found it difficult to compare all these varieties, as it is a disputed question which is the best kind to raise for Ensilage.

As Ensilage is now an important crop, would it not be well for the Society to make two classes, one to include all the smaller varieties.

Sweet Corn is now mostly used for Sowed Corn. We examined many good pieces, while a few in our judgment were planted too thick. Several pieces of early varieties gave a fair amount of stalks, with an abundance of ears.

We realized that our appointment brought us to the best farms in the county, and into the homes of many prosperous farmers.

We take this opportunity to express our thanks for the entertainment we received.

In submitting our report for consideration, your committee deem it their duty to make a few suggestions: In the first place it seems advisable that it in the future the committee should be instructed at what time they should begin to view the crops entered for premiums.

We began, in the opinion of some, too early, others thought we did not begin soon enough; said their crops had been ready for weeks. Some thought it advisable for us to make two trips so as to accommodate all. Now, in our opinion, it would give better satisfaction to have the time stated and have the competitors act accordingly.

We would advise all to ascertain the size of their field before entering crops for premium, as we consider it the duty of a committee to measure when there is the slightest doubt.

We viewed many excellent crops that we would have been pleased to have awarded premiums, but it was not in our power to do so. They showed excellent care, leaving the impression upon our minds that the competitors were first-class farmers. The drouth was more severe in some localities than in others making a decided difference from what the crops otherwise would have been.

In our opinion it would be better to increase the number of premiums and try to promote and encourage good farming. We think it would be a benefit to the society, the farmer, and the community-at-large.

Some crops had been harvested before we reached them, other competitors said they were aware that their crops were not worthy of a premium, but to them we wish to extend our thanks for the cordial welcome which we received at their homes.

In conclusion we would say that, actuated by a sense of duty, we have in all cases tried to use our best judgment.

No doubt we have not met the expectation of all, but we have tried to do justice. Remember, we are but human, and as such are liable to err.

Butter.

Whole number of entries, 20.

Best 20 pounds of Butter, Mrs. J. A. Griffith, Sheffield, 5 00

This specimen of Butter, offered by me for premium, was made from Jersey milk set in Cooley creamer and was skimmed after having stood twelve hours. The cream stood two days to ripen, and was churned at a temperature of 63 degrees in Blanchard churn and salted one ounce to the pound. No color used. MRS. J. A. GRIFFITH.

2d, Mrs. G. A. Phillips, Egremont, 5 00

The milk for making this Butter was set in pans, cream churned in a dash churn, Butter worked with a ladle and salted one ounce to the pound. MRS. G. A. PHILLIPS.

3d, Mrs. W. J. Henderson, Lenox, 5 00

This Butter was made from the milk of Grade Jersey cows. Cows fed on pasture feed and green corn stalks. The milk was set in pans by the old system; positively no cooler used. MRS. WILLIAM J. HENDERSON.

4th, Mrs. H. C. Hulett, Sheffield, $4 00

This Butter was made by the Cooley Creamer process. The milk was allowed to stand twelve hours, and was salted three-quarters of an ounce to the pound. MRS. H. C. HULETT.

5th, Mrs. John C. Smith, Sheffield, $4 00

My Butter was made from grade Jersey cows. The milk set in ice water and skimmed at twenty-four hours. The cream was allowed to thicken and then it was churned in a common dash churn, and at a temperature of 62 degrees. When it was taken from the churn it was washed and salted, one ounce to the pound; then I let it stand over night, and then it was packed. MRS. JOHN C. SMITH.

6th, Mrs. Corodon Downs, New Marlboro, $4 00

This Butter is made from grade Jersey cows; milk set in Cooley creamer. The cream churned, while sweet, in Davis swing churn, at a temperature of 64 degrees. The Butter is washed in cold water; salted with Worcester salt, three-fourths ounce to the pound, and worked in a Reid butter worker. MRS. CORODON DOWNS.

7th, Mrs. I. N. Benedict, Monterey, $3 00

The Butter exhibited by me was made by use of the Cooley system.

Churned when ripened in a Stoddard barrel churn, and salted one ounce to the pound with Worcester salt. MRS I. N. BENEDICT.

8th, Mrs. M. Mangion, Great Barrington, $3 00

This Butter was made from grade Jersey cows. The milk was set in Crystal creamer twelve hours, and drawn off, and the cream allowed to stand until slightly acid; then churned in a crank churn; thoroughly washed, and salted with one ounce of Worcester salt to the pound; worked and packed with a ladle. MRS. M. MANGION.

9th Mrs. T. S. Baldwin, Egremont, $3 00

This Butter was made from milk of grade Jersey cows; set in Cooley creamer; cream ripened and churned in Davis swinging churn; salted one ounce to the pound; worked in butter worker and packed.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The first Farmers' Institute for 1895 was held in the Town Hall, Great Barrington, on February 12. The subject was "Tuberculosis in Cattle," by Prof. James B. Paige of Amherst, Mass. A most interesting and instructive address was attentively listened to by the seventy farmers present, Prof. Paige handling the subject in a masterly manner. A short discussion followed the lecture, Messrs. M. I. Wheeler, C. B. Benedict, F. A. Palmer, T. S. Baldwin and others taking part. A second meeting was the joint Farmers' Institute under the auspices of the Berkshire and Housatonic Agricultural Societies, which was held in Grange Hall, Lee, Mass, Tuesday, March 12. The speaker of the morning session was Elbridge Cushman, Esq. of Lakeville, Mass., a successful and well-known dairyman, who discussed the subject, "The Cost of a Quart of Milk." Ex-Senator S. A. Hickox of Williamstown, Mass., was the speaker at the afternoon session. Mr. Hickox explained by two charts "Relative Proportions of Nutriment" and "Value of Feeds." Both addresses proved to be pleasing and instructive and were enjoyed by the seventy-five or more people present. The third and last Institute for 1895 was held at the Town Hall, Great Barrington, on November 26. Subject, "Management of a Dairy Farm," which was well handled by Mr. George L. Clemence of Globe Village, Mass., a member of the State Board of Agriculture and a practical farmer.

The society has invested considerable money the past year in improvements at the Fair Grounds. An extension of sixty feet has been added to the north end of the grand stand, and the additional receipts from the sale of seats prove that this was a wise investment.

Horse stalls 100 feet long and fourteen feet wide were built on the east side of the track, which also proved to be a judicious investment and a great convenience.

The society was very fortunate this year in the almost perfect weather that prevailed all three days. The exhibits in general were good. The trotting was perhaps, not all that could be desired, although great effort was made on the part of the trotting committee to secure an attractive list of entries. The special attractions were of unsual merit and consisted of Harry Roncoe, trick bicyclist; Romalo Brothers, head balancers: Miss May Stewart, the accomplished horsewoman; Prof O. G. Seymour, trick and high jumper, and Prof. J. H. Burton, with eleven performing dogs. These, together with other pleasing events, provided an almost continuous performance, which elicited much praise and applause from the great crowds that thronged the grand stand.

This feature of our successful fair has become an absolute necessity, as the people, wearied by the exciting scenes and jostling crowd, desire and must have a comfortable seat, where they may rest, exchange social greetings, and be entertained by new and interesting attractions.

The exercises in the Hall on the third day were of much interest, a most excellent address on "Taxation and Suffrage" being delivered by Hon. H. C. Joyner, in which the speaker pointed out and made clear to the average mind many of the intricacies and knotty problems of law as it affects the farmer. The address was attentively listened to by the large audience present and proved to be of much practical value.

A number of improvements can yet be made to advantage in the Hall and about the grounds. It is believed that if the fruit and vegetables could be shown together in a separate building, or tent, better light could be secured and a better opportunity afforded for arranging and displaying the exhibits in this department. At many fairs very pretty effects are obtained by the artistic and attractive arrangement of the fruits and vegetables. A special effort should be made in the development of this class of exhibits. It has been suggested by people having a practical knowledge of such matters, that the band stand should be moved across the track to a point perhaps fifty feet north of the judges' stand. The music would thereby be more evenly distributed and the attractions would thus be grouped together directly in front of the grand stand where the greatest interest centers.

The society is to be congratulated upon the fact that the last exhibition was the greatest in its history in point of attendance and general excellence. The Great Barrington Fair is winning fresh laurels every year, and as it provides with every recurring anniversary what has been aptly termed a "Grand Harvest Festival" for all of the people for many miles around, it becomes the plain duty of every officer and every member of the society, in the light of its glorious past, to make every endeavor to promote and advance its promising future.

FRANK H. BRIGGS,
Secretary.

Committee to Fill Vacancies.

Committee to appoint persons to fill vacancies which may occur in the various Examining Committees—President and Secretary.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

All premiums, except those allowed by special regulations, are confined to the limits of the County, and, except in the ladies' department, to members of the society. Competitors must be citizens of the County.

Members in arrears are not entitled to receive premiums, or to any privileges of membership while such delinquency continues.

Competitors will NOT be limited to one premium in each Division, but will be restricted to one premium for each description of animal, article or crop.

The producer of a crop is entitled to a premium rather than the owner of the land.

Any person receiving a first premium of not less than three dollars, may in place thereof receive a Diploma, if the person so prefer.

For Articles Exhibited.

No articles shall ever be entitled to more than one first premium from this Society.

All articles must have been manufactured or grown by the competitors within the County since the last exhibition, and must be delivered to the Superintendent of the Exhibition Hall, or to one of his assistants, before 12 o'clock, noon, on the first day of the Fair. The name and residence of the manufacturer or producer MUST NOT appear on the articles in any department.

Articles on exhibition MUST NOT be removed from the hall until the afternoon of the second day, and if articles which have received an award are removed before that time the exhibitor will be liable to forfeiture of premium.

All articles must be removed from the hall as early as six o'clock of the second day. The Society will not hold itself responsible for articles left in the hall after that hour.

For Animals.

Every animal presented for premium must be owned by the competitor.

Any animal may receive a premium whenever the committee in their opinion think it deserving, provided it shall have been owned by the competitor three months next preceding the date of its being offered for premium.

No animal can compete for two premiums the same year, except in division of trotting horses. No single team can compete for both draft and working oxen the same year.

The specimens of progeny of Stock Cows and Thoroughbred Cows may compete for premiums.

Calves shall be considered Calves until they are twelve months old.

Entries of all Animals and Birds for exhibition must be made with the Secretary on or before the Saturday next preceding the Fair.

All Stock kept at large on the grounds over night shall be secured before nine o'clock a. m., of the first day of the Fair.

Every Animal must be labeled with a card bearing the Classification of the Animal and the name and residence of the competitor. Cards for that purpose will be furnished by the Society. A place will be assigned each Animal by the Stock Marshal as the Animals are driven on the Fair Grounds.

In accordance with the State law, all Stock must remain in the position assigned them on the Grounds, until three o'clock in the afternoon of the first day of the Fair, and no Animal will be allowed to leave such position before that time.

☞ The Stock Marshal will see that this Regulation is strictly enforced.

Examining Committee.

No animal or article in any of the departments will receive any premium where, in the opinion of the Committee, it is palpably undeserving, even though no competitor should appear against any such animal or article so presented, and whenever the Committee consider that an inferior premium only is deserved, they shall withhold the larger premiums offered for such animal, or article, or crop, and award according to their judgment. The object of the Society is not to give away premiums, but to promote improvement in the various departments by inciting proper emulation. Any unfair or disingenuous means resorted to by any competitor is antagonistic to the spirit of the institution, and subjects the offender to a penalty; and the Committee in conducting their examinations and in determining their awards, will be governed strictly by these considerations.

Committees in their awards shall NOT exceed the appropriations in their Divisions, nor will they be permitted to award any extra premiums except when the regulations in such Divisions allow it; see, also, Article XV of the By-Laws.

Committees are instructed to place premium cards bearing the names of the persons receiving premiums upon the articles or animals immediately after the awards — blue for first; red for second; white for third. If any animal or any article be exhibited which would receive a premium but for the rules of the Society making such animal or articles ineligible, the exhibitor shall receive a certificate from the Committee certifying the facts.

All persons appointed to serve as Committees, who shall desire to compete for premiums in their own Divisions, and who do not notify the Secretary to that effect at least one week before the opening of the Fair, shall be excluded from competing for such premiums.

Examining Committees must present themselves at the Secretary's office, ready for duty, on the day their services are required, fifteen minutes before the time for examining of articles or animals.

Where any premium appears to have been illegally awarded, the Treasurer may withhold it at the time of distributing the awards, and the Executive Committee will meet at Great Barrington on the Monday next succeeding the Fair, for the purpose of examining the list of awards, and if it shall appear that any premium has been improperly withheld, they shall authorize the Treasurer to deliver the same to the claimant, or if they shall find that any premium has been awarded by mistake, or in violation of the By-Laws and Regulations of the Society, the Committee shall require that person so receiving the premium to return the same, and may recommend such proceedings in the case as they deem proper.

All premiums remaining uncalled for in the Treasurer's hands on the first day of December succeeding the award will revert to the Society.

Merchants and others wishing to make a display of their goods and wares, for exhibition only, will have facilities afforded for their accommodation, so far as is practicable, without charge, but no premium will be allowed on any such exhibition, nor shall it occupy space needed by the competitors for premiums.

Individuals having works of art or curiosity, or antiquarian articles which they are willing to exhibit without competition, are respectfully solicited to do so free of charge. Cards will be attached to the articles, and honorable mention made when deemed worthy.

The State Board of Agriculture, in order to better promote the cause of Agriculture throughout the State, has made the following rules, which all societies are required to follow:

FIRST—That in awarding premiums, especially on Live Stock, Vegetables and Fruits, there shall be established by this Board a scale of points, which shall be adopted by all the Societies, so that there shall be a uniform standard throughout the State.

SECOND—That in awarding prizes for Butter and Cheese, Field Crops and Experiments, a written statement shall accompany each entry, setting forth how the Butter or Cheese was made, the Crop raised, or the Experiment conducted; in short, giving a brief history in relation to the matter.

THIRD—That in the judging of all Live Stock, Fruit and Vegetables, each Society shall employ an expert or experts, unless excused by the Executive Committee of the Board. These expert judges shall be instructed to appoint a time for listening to appeals, and to give their reasons for the decisions at which they have arrived, if called for; but their decisions shall be final.

BERKSHIRE COUNTY, MASS.

ARTICLE I.

The object of this Society shall be Improvement in Agriculture, Domestic Manufactures and Rural Economy in the County of Berkshire.

ARTICLE II.

The Officers of this Society shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, Treasurer and a Secretary.

ARTICLE III.

The Committees of the Society shall be:

FIRST—An Executive Committee, consisting of the President, Vice-President, a Treasurer, Secretary, and six persons elected from the Society at large, three of whom shall be elected each year and hold their office for two years. The Delegate to the State Board of Agriculture and the retiring President, for one year shall be a member of the Executive Committee.

SECOND—Standing Committees of at least two members each, for each Department, or for each Division of any Department, the number of Divisions of the General Departments being determined by the Executive Committee, annually.

THIRD—Committee on Accounts, which shall be the Executive Committee.

FOURTH—A Superintendent of Fair Grounds, who shall be elected by the Society at the Annual Meeting, and be under the Superintendence and control of the Executive Committee. He shall give bonds to the Treasurer in the sum of one thousand dollars, with one or more sureties, for the faithful discharge of his duty, and on or before the first day of November he shall pay to the Treasurer all money of the Society received by him during the year, with a detailed account of rent moneys and all other funds which he has received.

ARTICLE IV.

The Annual Meeting of the Society shall be held at Great Barrington, on the second Thursday of December, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the Election of Officers, Appointment of Committees, and for the Transaction of all other Business properly before the Society.

ARTICLE V.

The President, Vice-Presidents, Treasurer and Secretary shall be elected by ballot, and all other officers as the Society shall direct.

ARTICLE VI.

A quorum shall consist of not less than twelve members, including the presiding officer.

ARTICLE VII.

The officers of the Society shall enter upon their respective duties on the second Thursday of December, annually, and continue in office one year, and until superseded by another Board, and in case of vacancy, by death, resignation, or otherwise, a new election may be had to fill such vacancy, for which purpose the Society may be convened by the senior existing officer of the Society, by a notice from him to that effect, inserted in two or more of the county papers, at least fourteen days previous to the time specified for such Convention. Vacancies occurring in any of the Committees of the Society may be filled by the Executive Committee, at any of its regular or special meetings.

ARTICLE VIII.

The members of this Society shall consist of Ordinary and Honorary Members.

Any person may become a member of the Society by paying two dollars to the Treasurer the first year, and one dollar yearly, afterwards, payable at the Annual Fair, or previously thereto if the party so desire; and no member whose dues accruing at the next Annual Fair, or any time thereafter, remain unpaid, shall be entitled to the rights and privileges of a member while such delinquency continues. (The Treasurer is authorized to withhold the member's ticket or badge from such delinquent until such arrearages be paid.) Or, second, the paying into the Treasury of the Society $16.67, securing by such payment perpetual membership, exempt from all future taxation. Such membership to be transferable only on the books of the Society kept by the Treasurer for that purpose.

Any gentleman paying $10 or lady paying $5 into the Treasury, shall be entitled to a certificate of Life membership, which certificate shall secure to the holder thereof all the privileges of any other membership, except that such a certificate is not transferable.

ARTICLE IX.

Honorary Members may be elected by a vote of the Executive Committee at any of its regular meetings, and shall consists of agriculturalists or eminent advocates of the agricultural interests, residing out of the County. Such members shall be entitled to the same privileges as Life Members, but not to vote.

ARTICLE X.

Persons who have become members of the Society by the old method of giving their note, and who may wish to withdraw from the same, can do so upon the payment in full of all arrears due to the Society on such note, together with interest for one year in advance, in which case their note will be surrendered.

ARTICLE XI.

DUTIES OF THE SEVERAL OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES OF THE SOCIETY.

DUTIES OF THE PRESIDENT.

SECTION 1.—The President shall exercise the usual duties of that office. He shall superintend the various departments—cause the laws of the Society and the measures of the Executive Committee to be carried into effect, and see that the several officers of the Society discharge their respective duties with fidelity. He may call special meetings of the Society whenever he shall deem it necessary, by notification to that effect inserted in two or more of the County papers, at least fourteen days previous to such meetings, excepting meetings for filling vacancies in Committees on days of the Fair, and he may also convene, at his pleasure, the Executive Committee, by giving the members eight days' previous notice, either in writing or through the medium of the County papers. In case of the death, resignation or absence of the President his duties shall be performed by the Vice-Presidents in the order in which they are named in the records. And in case of the death, resignation or absence of the President, and Vice-Presidents, a President pro tempore may be chosen at any meeting of the Society.

DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

SECTION 2.—The Treasurer shall collect and receive all the funds of the Society, and he may take such legal measures for the collection thereof as he thinks proper, at the expense of the Society, under the direction of the President or the Executive Committee. He shall give bonds to the President in the sum of $3,000 with one or more sureties, as the President may require, for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. No payment can be made by the Treasurer but by the authority of the Committee of Accounts. He shall keep the accounts methodically in a book kept for the purpose and belonging to the Society, and whenever called upon by the President, or any member of the Executive Committee, he shall produce the same for inspection. And he shall exhibit to the Society at its annual meeting, a regular account current of the transactions of the year, and whenever his office expires he shall give into the hands of the President a fair and regular account of all receipts and expenditures, together with the books and funds of the Society, to be by him delivered to the Treasurer-elect. At the first meeting of the Executive Committee, thereafter, these accounts shall be laid before them by the President, and if found correct, the President shall be authorized to give a discharge thereon, and to cancel the bond of the Treasurer.

DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY.

SECTION 3.—The Secretary shall keep the records and archives of the Society, and have in charge all letters and papers relating to the correspondences of the same. He shall conduct all the correspondence of the Society, keep a record of all important letters written, and keep on file all letters received, pertaining to the business of the Society. He shall be present at all the meetings of the Society and of the Executive Committee, and record their proceedings. He shall countersign all diplomas and certificates relative to premiums, when given, and shall notify the members of the Executive Committee, verbally or in writing, of each of their stated meetings, not less than three, or more than ten days previous to such meeting, designating the time and place of holding the same, and shall give at least fourteen days' notice, by newspaper publication, of the annual meetings of the Society.

DUTIES OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

SECTION 4.—The Executive Committee shall appropriate the funds of the Society, determine on all premiums to be awarded, admit Honorary Members, regulate the Annual Cattle Show and Fair, and adopt any and all such measures as they shall deem expedient for the well-being of the Society, not inconsistent with the act of incorporation and the laws of the Society. They shall meet statedly at Great Barrington on the first Wednesday of November, March, June and September, at such place and hour of the day as the Secretary shall appoint, and all their transactions shall be recorded, at the time, in a book of records belonging especially to this committee, by the Secretary, who shall keep on regular files all plans and proposals adopted at these meetings. At each successive meeting the business of the preceding one shall be read by the Secretary before proceeding to any new business. A quorum shall consist of not less than four members, and in the absence of the President a chairman shall be appointed pro tempore. They shall meet at Great Barrington, on the Monday next succeeding the Fair for the purpose of examining the list of awards, and if it shall appear that any premium has been improperly withheld, they shall authorize the Treasurer to deliver the same to the claimant, or if they shall find that any premium has been awarded by mistake, or in violation of the By-Laws and Regulations of the Society, the Committee shall require the person so receiving the premium to return the same, and may recommend such proceeding in the case as they may deem proper.

DUTIES OF STANDING COMMITTEE.

SECTION 5.—The special duties of the Standing Committee shall be to take into consideration the wants of the community and the interests of the Society, as connected with their respective departments, and through their chairman to communicate to the Executive Committee, at their stated meeting on the first Wednesday of November, annually, such suggestions as they may deem proper in relation to the making out of the annual premium list.

DUTIES OF COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

SECTION 6.—The Committee on Accounts shall receive, examine and admit all claims on the Society, and if just, certify them, or so much as is allowed upon them, which certified accounts shall be vouchers for payments by the Treasurer. They shall also settle with the Treasurer annually, on or before the first day of December.

ARTICLE XII.

The annual Cattle Show and Fair of the Society shall be held at Great Barrington, commencing on the last Wednesday in September, and continuing three days, unless otherwise ordered by the Society at its annual meeting, when an address will be delivered before the Society, reports heard from the different Boards of Examiners, and the premiums awarded.

ARTICLE XIII.

The premiums of the Society shall be paid in plate, unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Committee, and shall be awarded by the respective Committees appointed annually by the Society, and if any animal or any article be exhibited which would receive a premium but for the rules of the Society making such animal or article ineligible, the exhibitor shall receive a diploma or certificate from the Committee certifying the facts.

ARTICLE XIV.

Any member of any Committee of the Society, who wishes to be a competitor for a premium on an article or crop in his department, shall notify the Secretary of his wish, at least two weeks previous to the time appointed for the commencement of his duties, whereupon he shall be discharged from serving on said committee and the Executive Committee or Committee on Vacancies may appoint another to serve in his place.

ARTICLE XV.

If any person shall attempt to obtain any premium by fraud or by offering any article of household manufacture which was in whole or part manufactured in a factory (the dyeing and finishing of cloths excepted, as also the weaving of blankets and carpets, when so excepted by the proposals of the Society), or shall offer any article clandestinely, not belonging to him or her, or any article that may have received the premium before (animals excepted), such a person, if a member, shall be forever after expelled from the Society; or if a female, or a person not a member, he or she shall be forever thereafter precluded from receiving any premium from the Society, and shall have his or her name entered on the records of the Society, and of the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE XVI.

All property, real and personal, which may belong to the Society, shall be vested in the ordinary members thereof.

ARTICLE XVII.

No person shall enter more than one team for premium on plowing.

ARTICLE XVIII.

In the award of premiums on Crops, the Committee shall be governed by the circumstances under which the crops offered are produced, and the method of their production, whether skillful or otherwise.

ARTICLE XIX.

SECTION 1.—Any animal may receive a premium whenever the Committee, in their opinion, think it deserving, provided it shall have been owned by the competitor three months next preceding the date of its being offered for premium.

SECTION 2.—No article shall ever be entitled to more than one first premium from this Society.

SECTION 3.—Competitors will be restricted to one premium for each description of animal, article or crop.

ARTICLE XX.

Repealed December 8, 1892.

ARTICLE XXI.

These By-Laws may be altered or amended by a two-thirds vote of the members present at the annual meeting, or any special meeting in the call for which due notice of the intention of the Society to make alterations in the By-Laws has been given.
